TEACHERS PROTEST PAY PLAN

The proposed teachers' salary schedule and plans for its administration recently compiled by the Citizens' Committee on Teachers' Salaries in Pittsburgh, is weak, and its application in present form would spell ruin for the city's educational system, according to opinions expressed by some teachers.

No official pronouncement is obtainable from the Board of Education, the citizens' committee or the Teachers' Association, but in the teaching ranks of the city considerable comment has been produced by a referendum vote, taken with a view to determine the attitude of the teachers toward the proposal.

POLL RESULTS HELD

Results of the poll have not been announced, nor will they be given out until after the Central Salary Committee of the Teachers' Association has had opportunity to study them thoroughly, according to Miss Maud Walker, president of the Teachers' Association.

A conference between this committee and the Board of Education is to take place today in the board's administration building and suggestions will be laid before Supt. William M. Davidson and the board. No definite action will come out of this meeting, nor are any radical changes in the proposal expected to follow. The purpose of the conference, it is explained, is to create a better understanding of conditions between the board and the teachers.

OPPOSED TO LIMITS

The most serious objection to the citizens' committee plan seems to center around the proposal to limit by percentage the number of teachers eligible for the superior teaching levels for the distribution of increased salaries. The committee recommends that "specific salary levels above the automatic maximum be established for such teachers who have demonstrated their superior ability and who have attained additional specific qualifications."

The committee's recommendation explains that "in order to establish budgetary limits and in the light of the experience in other cities, no more than 45 percentum of the teachers who have reached the auto-

Truman, State Game Board Head, Resigns

HARRISBURG, Pa., Dec. 3.—(AP.)—John B. Truman, executive secretary of the state game commission, today announced his resignation, effective January 1.

"I have determined to go into business for myself," he said. He was non-committal on reports that the present complicated situation concerning the hunting of doe deer had anything to do with his resignation.

SLOAN ASSERTS WALL STREET 'OVERSTEPS'

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN,
International News Service.
(Copyright, 1928, by International News Service.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors Corporation, is of the opinion that the New York stock market, which has been cutting spectacular didoes for many weeks, "has overdiscounted its earning power for some time to come." He said so today in an exclusive interview with the writer. He made it clear, however, that he does not class himself as an authority on the market and that he was expressing his opinion merely as an individual.

"There is one fundamental way to create wealth. That is through work," said Mr. Sloan when pressed for his views on the orgy of speculation in Wall Street in which the American public is playing such a heavy part.

MAKES HUGE PROFIT

"Anyone connected with the multitude of problems coming up daily in a large corporation is undoubtedly a poor judge of a thing like the stock market," said Mr. Sloan, whose time and energy has been concentrated in directing the affairs of a corporation which this year will do a gross business of between $1,500,000,000 and $1,750,000,000 and show the largest profits for a single year ever made by any industrial corporation in peacetime.

"I do not mind saying, however, that my viewpoint—which is not an original one—is that the market has overdiscounted its earning power for some time to come. I am speaking of the whole trend of the market and not with reference to any individual security. It must be recognized that, after all, values can only be maintained if supported by earning power.

"When I hear, as I frequently do, of large sums being made in the stock market through the increasing values that are being established—and I realize that this is going on to a certain extent all over the country—I sometimes ask myself if, from one angle, it is not unfortunate? For there is only one fundamental way to create wealth, and that is through work.

WORK DISCOUNTED

"The large profit, relatively or otherwise, made through the stock market has a tendency to discount work which, after all, makes these things possible. In the last analysis, the stock market simply capitalizes and estab-

Meyer to Decide Soon on 120 Rum Cases

United States Attorney John D. Meyer said today that he would decide within a few days whether the conspiracy case against approximately 50 South Side defendants would be called for trial on December 10, as the court calendar lists it.

Since the collapse of a similar charge against 46 North Side politicians, police and alleged racketeers, Meyer has been silent on the government's attitude toward the case of the other 120 persons indicted in the city-wide federal probe.

There was gossip today that, conspiracy being difficult to prove on a large scale, the government might present its evidence to another grand jury and hope for indictments of a different nature.

MAYOR'S OUSTER VOIDED

The Civil Service Commission today ordered the reinstatement of A. F. Nolan, inspector in the bureau of weights and measures, "dismissed" on election day last May by Mayor Charles H. Kline.

According to testimony presented at the hearing on the Nolan case by Murray J. Livingston, head of the bureau, the discharge was ordered by the Mayor when Nolan would not influence a relative to change her vote in the McManus-O'Malley battle for the Second ward chairmanship.

The decision to reinstate Nolan was announced after the members of the Civil Service Commission had held a meeting with the Mayor in the latter's office.

'NOTHING TO SAY'

"I have nothing to say at this time," said Mayor Kline after that meeting. He would not discuss the charges made by Livingston in his testimony but added that he might have a statement after discussing the case with Assistant City Solicitor W. J. Connelly, who represented the city at the hearing.

The position from which Nolan was discharged was filled by George Myers, of the Thirteenth Ward, whose pay has been held up pending today's decision. Inasmuch as the reinstatement order indicates that no vacancy existed, the status of Myers' pay since he was appointed to the job is in doubt.

At the hearing on the case Livingston testified that Kline had instructed him to get Nolan to influence the vote of a relative, Mrs. Henrietta Caldwell, in the ward chairmanship fight. Informing the Mayor that he was unable to persuade Nolan to do that, Livingston said, Kline told him to "tell Nolan to go home and not to come back."

"I was ordered to do it and I always obey orders," said Livingston.

Nolan, he testified, was a satisfactory employe "except that he was very deaf."

Graft Probers Bare Another Lottery

The graft-probing county grand jury today heard details of the operation of another lottery, the "Owl" lottery of Braddock. District Attorney Samuel Gardner had at least six witnesses on hand to supply these details. There were other witnesses ready to til of vice conditions in th Hill and East End districts, witnesses taken by county detectives who raided several places over the week-end.

Bride of three months, Mrs. Lena Gibson, 21, was found dead beside the unconscious form of her husband, Walter, 22, today in the bedroom of their home, 1013½ Second avenue, Coraopolis.

BRIDE KILLED BY GAS; MATE OVERCOME

Lying side by side, Mrs. Lena Gibson, 21, bride of three months, was found dead and her husband, Walter, 22 unconscious from carbon monoxide this morning in their bedroom on the second floor of 1013½ Second avenue, Coraopolis.

At the Sewickley Valley Hospital, where the husband was taken, it was said his condition was serious, but that he likely would recover.

J. L. McClellan, father of Mrs. Gibson, alarmed at being unable to arouse anyone by knocking, this morning broke open the door and ran upstairs where he found husband and wife apparently lifeless. Physicians pronounced Mrs. Gibson dead, but her husband was still breathing. A lighted gas stove was in the room and the windows were closed.

Gibson was scheduled to work yesterday for the Foundation Company on Neville Island. His employers and relatives thought little of his absence yesterday, but when he failed to report this morning they began an investigation.

WALES' RACE TO KING'S SIDE SPEEDED

LONDON, Dec. 3.—The Prince of Wales will travel across continental Europe by fast train to shorten his journey home, it was officially announced this afternoon.

The Prince will transfer from the cruiser Enterprise to the cruiser Frobisher at Alexandria, leaving the Frobisher at Italy. He will travel overland, via Turin and Paris, to Calais, where he will board a fast destroyer for Dover

. The Prince of Wales is now hurrying from Dar-es-Salaam on the Enterprise. Another son of the King, the Duke of Gloucester, who was hunting near the border of Northern Rhodesia, was making a dash for the coast in a special coach today.

SAD FAREWELL

The Daily Mail today printed a dispatch from Dar-es-Salaam saying that the Prince's departure was "a farewell tinged with sadness, although the Prince had a smile on his face, as he turned away from the little group with whom he shook hands at the steps of the private pier of the government."

KING GIVEN OXYGEN IN CRISIS

International News Service.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—Officials at Buckingham Palace at 4 o'clock this afternoon officially denied a report said to have been published on the Regina (Sask.) Stock Exchange that King George was dead.

The report was cabled here from Regina.

Meanwhile England passed through the most anxious period since King George fell ill nearly a fortnight ago.

Despite the more cheerful tone of the 10:30 a. m. bulletin of the attending physicians, developments indicating a deepening of alarm both in and out of officials circles, piled up as the day advanced.

GIVEN OXYGEN

First, the physicians revealed that they had administered oxygen to the royal patient during the night. This became necessary when King George's heart grew weaker under the strain of his battle against his malady.

Next, officials announced that the Prince of Wales' journey to his father's side had been shortened by arranging to have the Prince carried across continental Europe on a fast train.

Extra editions of evening newspapers, containing the latest information on the illness of the King, were called in the streets for the first time since early in the days of the World War. The editions were quickly exhausted by eager buyers. This news expedient is usual only in times of grave national crisis, and the fact that it was adopted in connection with the King's illness was further indicative of the nation's increasing anxiety.

For the first time since the King's condition became serious Queen Mary this afternoon abandoned her usual automobile ride through Hyde Park.

FIGHTS FOR LIFE

There remained in the public mind today a conviction that the King was fighting for his life with the issues still very much in doubt. This was intensified by the knowledge that oxygen was being used in his case, although Buckingham palace authorities minimized the importance of this and explained it was customary to administer oxygen for its tonic effect in such cases.

"I do not want for one moment to deceive anyone and say the King's illness is over, for things were serious last night," said

CHILEAN QUAKE DEAD NEAR 300

SANTIAGO, Chile, Dec. 3.—(INS.)—The dead in the south Chilean earthquake may reach 300, it was estimated this afternoon. Nearly 600 were injured.

Official figures for casualties cannot be compiled until the wreckage at Talca, Constucion, Chilian, Curico, Santa Cruz, San Vicente, Rengo and Parrol is searched.

Food for the refugees has been sent by warship and special train.

President Ibanez has returned from a personal inspection tour.

Talca was completely destroyed. Constitucion, the nation's most beautiful watering resort, was nearly demolished.

Troops are maintaining order and aiding relief work.

The government will vote funds for the homeless.

Congress Gets Bill For 10th St. Bridge

A bill authorizing construction of a new bridge to replace the South Tenth street span over the Monongahela river was introduced in Congress today by Congressman Harry A. Estep, according to a Washington dispatch. The proposed bridge, which will be 1,800 feet long, including approaches, is estimated to cost $1,925,000. It was one of the projects in the county peoples' bond issue last June.

BIG TASK FACES CONGRESS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—The short session of the Seventieth Congress facing a tremendous volume of work, met for an hour today, devoting its time to formalities incident to an opening day and adjourned out of respect for members who have died during the recess. The Senate adjourned shortly after it met at noon and the House quit at 1 p. m.

Enactment of farm relief legislation during this session of congress was asked today by Senator Edge, Republican, New Jersey, who declared in a statement that the necessity for a special sesion could not be determined until it is learned how rapidly the regular session will proceed.

Representative John C. Box, of Jacksonville, Tex., today was selected as Democratic whip to succeed Representative William A. Oldfield, of Arkansas, who died recently.

DECEPTION ISLAND (Antarctica), Dec. 2.—(Via whaler Hektoria and KUP—San Francisco Examiner radio station.)—Our plane is salvaged!

We have taken it from the hole in the ice into which it fell yesterday. It is now on the beach. We floated it in on pontoons today.

It is apparently little the worse for its unfortunate ducking, but we can't tell the extent of the damage until we take the engine apart and examine it thoroughly.

The weather has been fine. The ice on the harbor from a distance looks safe, but is deadly and treacherous.

We have fretted more at being unable to leave than from strenuous salvage work these last two days.

GARDNER TOLD KLINE CAN DIVORCE POLICE, POLITICS

"If the Mayor of Pittsburgh wants to keep the police out of politics, he can do it. The Mayor of Detroit does it."

Prosecuting Attorney Robert M. Sams, of Wayne county, Michigan, thus briefly summarized the Pittsburgh police controversy started when District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner made an urgent plea that the police force be divorced from politics.

The visiting prosecutor had a prolonged conference with District Attorney Gardner to explain workings of the Detroit police system, which is regarded as successfully divorced from political influences.

"The Detroit police system," Gardner said after the conference, "will be given careful study and, with information I obtain regarding police systems in other cities, it will undoubtedly have an influence in recommendations to be made in the presentment by our grand jury as to divorcing Pittsburgh police from political control.

The political situation generally in Detroit is an important contributing factor, as well as an important result, of an uncontrolled police force, it was explained by Toms. The city charter provides for an election commission, with the city clerk and the courts represented, and this commission selects five reputable citizens, not residing in the election district to which appointed, to serve as an election board. The personnel of the boards changes with each election.

ONE SHOW GOES ON

The show in Greenberg's theater was held as scheduled, Hoey having not heard of the show until it was almost finished. He arrested Greenberg at the close of the performance. Hoey said that in addition to selling tickets on Sunday, the men did not have city permission to hold the benefits.

HOOVER OFF FOR PERU CAPITAL

U. S. S. MARYLAND, En Route to Callao, Peru, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Convoyed by the flagship of the Peruvian Navy, the Almirante Grau, this mighty warship speeded southward today through smooth seas for Callao, where President-elect Hoover will make the second call of his South American goodwill tour on Wednesday.

In preparation for his visit to Peru—One of the oldest seats of South American history and cultures—Mr. Hoover today worked upon the speech he will deliver at a state dinner at Lima, Wednesday night. It will be the most elaborate address he has delivered so far on his goodwill tour of Latin America.

Upon arrival Mr. Hoover will be greeted on the Maryland by the Peruvian foreign minister, personally representing President Leguia. He will be welcomed on landing by the mayor of Callao, who will extend to him the freedom of the city. After this ceremony, the President-elect and members of his party will motor 10 miles to Lima, the Peruvian capital, and go directly to the American embassy where greetings will be exchanged with members of the American colony.

GOING TO PALACE

A rest will intervene before the party goes to the presidential palace to meet President Leguia. There will be a reception and dance for the Hoovers before they return to the ship at midnight to continue their voyage southward.

It is now fairly certain that Mr. Hoover will stop at a Chilean port north of Valparaiso to receive representatives of the Bolivian government, who will journey from La Paz to greet him.

Antofagasta is the port now under consideration for halting the Maryland for Mr. Hoover to entertain the Bolivians aboard.

Expectations are that the goodwill ship will reach Valparaiso December 10.

The President-elect looked back today with pleasure and satisfaction on his visit to Guayaquil, Ecuador, where he was honored by President Ayora and other officials of the republic, who are regarded as extremely friendly toward the United States.

STUDY OF BUGS NOT A FAD—A NECESSITY

Chasing butterflies is not the most futile occupation in the world, as one might be led to believe from a picture of a full-grown, healthy man, net in hand, pursuing the elusive specimen on the wing.

Were it not for the knowledge gained from the 1,500,000 or more specimens in Carnegie Museum and billions of other specimens collected throughout the world, this planet would be a very uncomfortable place to live. Entomology and entomologists have given to the world important scientific facts which make this world habitable, revealing what insects are beneficial to mankind as well as teaching him how to rid infested places of the harmful insect.

BIG COLLECTION HERE

In Pittsburgh there are a number of outstanding figures in the world of entomology. There is Dr. W. J. Holland, director emeritus of Carnegie Museum, whose personal collection gathered from the four corners of the world over a period of more than 70 years has given science invaluable assistance, and today the museum's collection of more than a million and a half specimens is presided over by Dr. Hugo Kahl, a native of Sweden, who has been with the museum for 26 years. Associated with Dr. Kahl are two other well-known entomologists—H. G. Klages and B. Krautwurm.

In the Carnegie Museum's collection are many valuable specimens. Butterflies of many-hued varieties; beetles, some of them larger than rats; spiders of the most poisonous type and thousands of other queer-looking insects—some of them resembling leaves, others twigs—make up this interesting collection. Every one is cataloged; its history and other scientific data are attached to each specimen, some of which are almost microscopic in size. It is a most valuable collection and scientists the world over look to Pittsburgh's collection for valuable data and helpful suggestions having to do with insect life.

KING IS GIVEN OXYGEN IN CRISIS

Home Secretary Sir William Joynson-Hicks in a speech at the Constitutional Club this afternoon. He added:

"But, there is undoubtedly a feeling in the air that His Majesty is better today."

Meanwhile, the Prince of Wales and his younger brother, the Duke of Gloucester, were speeding home from hunting trips in Africa to their father's side.

Sir Stanley Hewett and Lord Dawson Penn, the King's physicians, issued this medical bulletin at 10:30 a. m.:

"The King has had three hours of quieter sleep since issuing of the last bulletin. The temperature is now 99.8 and there is a slight improvement in the general condition."

No mention was made of how the King's hard taxed heart was functioning with the exception of the inference regarding it contained in the statement that his general condition was slightly improved.

MAKING STERN FIGHT

That the king's constitution is making a stern fight against the weakness induced by his long struggle against microbic infection is the impression produced in palace circles and elsewhere by the bulletin stating that his condition has improved, if only slightly.

It is understood that the king's physicians' great desire is that he maintain his strength as it seems quite evident from their bulletins that his resisting power, especially the strength of his heart, is considered a vital matter.

Premier Baldwin called at Buckingham palace at 12:30 p. m. and had a half hour conversation with Lord Dawson, but did not see the king.

A picturesque figure in the crowd at the palace gates today was a tall Maori gaudily attired in a costume of white and gold. None seemed more anxious to read the bulletin than he and as his height gave him a distinct advantage he was able to give the news contained in the bulletin to those on the fringe of the crowd.

A special force of mounted and foot police had a difficult task dealing with the crowd, but every effort was made to exercise tact and forbearance.

Wales' Secretary Denies Rumored Engagement

LONDON, Dec. 3.—(INS.)—A report printed in the United States that the Prince of Wales has become engaged to Lady Anne Maud Wellesley, was officially denied this afternoon.

Sir Godfrey Thomas, principal private secretary to the Prince, issued the following statement to International News Service:

"That story is perfectly untrue. It is absolutely without any foundation whatsoever."

Lady Anne is the 18-year-old daughter of the Marquis Douro, eldest son of the fourth Duke of Wellington.

cent, Iowa; Richard B. Wigglesworth, Massachusetts; Francis D. Culkin, New York; Robert R. Butler, Oregon, and James Wolfenden, Pennsylvania, Republicans.

Nine members of the Senate and one senator-elect were absent from their desks at today's Senate session.

As the membership of the two houses gathered in what will be the last session for many of them, the Boulder Canyon Dam bill held right of way in the Senate. In the House, nine appropriation bills, carrying several billion dollars, were in preparation.

Credentials of senators elected to fill unexpired terms were presented. There was none of the drama which attended the efforts during the past session to seat Frank L. Smith, of Illinois, and William S. Vare, of Pennsylvania, who were challenged at the Senate's portals.

The new Senate members included John Thomas, Republican, who succeeded Mr. Gooding. Arthur Vandenberg, of Michigan, presented credentials to succeed himself, and Otis F. Glenn presented papers entitling him to Smith's place.

Vice President Dawes named the two party leaders and incidentally the two men who fought for his job in the last campaign, Senator Curtis, of Kansas, and Robinson, of Arkansas, as the committee to represent the Senate in notifying President Coolidge that Congress was in session.

All four women representatives were on the floor, Mrs. Florence P. Kahn, California; Mrs. Katherine Langley, Kentucky, and Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers, Massachusetts, Republicans, and Mrs. Marty T. Norton, New Jersey, Democrat.

NEW PAY PLAN QUESTIONED BY TEACHERS

matic maximum ($2,200 per annum) shall be distributed in the superior teaching levels."

Such a limitation would kill the individual teacher's initiative, it is pointed out, and it would be much more beneficial both to the educational system as well as the teachers to set the limit only according to teaching ability rather than attempt to set an actual number of eligibles.

AGAINST NEW AIDE

The superior levels carry the individual from an annual salary of $2,200 to $3,200, the salary gradually increasing $200 for each level specified in the proposal.

The recommended plan for administration of the salary schedules also has met with adverse criticism on the part of many teachers. They do not consider the committee's proposal for the appointment of another associate superintendent to have charge of personnel necessary, claiming the present administrative department is adequately equipped to handle this phase of the system. The committee proposes for this position an individual to be appointed by the board upon recommendation of the superintendent.

"Naturally," the committee's recommendation reads, "he must be one who has a thoroughgoing knowledge of the teaching process and supervision; as well as one who has achieved an enviable record as a very superior educational administrator."

The proposed establishment of a personnel department would necessitate an annual expenditure of $35,000 per year.

pilot Ben Eielson suffered a ducking in the icy sea, and aerial operations are delayed about a week.

We took what we thought was a fifty-fifty chance. It turned out to be fifty to one against both machines. With only a pilot and a few gallons of gasoline aboard each, the planes took the air at 5:30 a. m.

Our object was to land on the ice with wheels, equip our planes with skies, then fuel up for flights. Orville Porter and I had inspected the ice last night.

BREAKS THROUGH ICE

The Los Angeles came down beautifully, taxiing several hundred feet. But as it came to rest the wheel struck a hole in the ice and went through. The machine slowly nosed over. Eielson fell through the ice, but managed to clamber out without suffering more than a wetting.

We tried to right the machine, but as its weight came on the wheels, they crunched through the ice. The plane sank until the wings and fuselage held it.

With a line and the willing help of the Norwegians, under directions of Mates Thorbjorson and Fendahal, we jacked up the machine on towers made especially for such an emergency. Then we slipped on the skids and hauled the plane safely onto solid ice. We must overhaul part of the engine. We have material to mend the wing and also a spare propeller.

In a week the machines should be ready fly, but we cannot use the harbor ice.

SLAIN "HEXING" SEER'S CASH MISSING

YORK, Pa., Dec. 3.—(INS.)—With a jar believed to have contained $800 missing from the home of Nelson Rehmeyer, a hermit, who was killed by a man and two youths Tuesday night when they attempted to obtain a lock of his hair to break a "spell," police today were attempting to obtain a confession of robbery from the trio under arrest.

Rehmeyer, who was said to have practiced "hexing" and "pow-wowing" in this community, was buried yesterday.

Detectives attending the funeral learned the slain man had kept a jar containing $800 in his house, but that the jar was missing after Rehmeyer had been killed.

DENY ROBBERY MOTIVE

John Curry, 14; Wilbert Hess, 17, and John H. Blymyer, 32, who are said to have confessed killing Rehmeyer, denied their motive for the slaying was robbery. They reiterated they had been forced to kill Rehmeyer when he resisted their attempts to obtain a lock of his hair when they intended to "bury eight feet in the ground to break the spell he had cast over Hess' family."

HEXERS' RIVALRY REVEALED

Blymyer also told police the slain man had "tried for him," meaning he had used witchcraft methods against him on several occasions, and he, Blymyer, was also a "witch doctor," practicing "pow-wowing" in the community.

Police quoted Blymyer as saying the motive for the slaying had been partly to obtain a handbook on witchcraft which the recluse was supposed to possess.

ONER HELD INSANE

HARRISBURG, Pa., Dec. 3.—(AP.)—John H. Blymyer, leader of the trio held at York in connection with the witchcraft murder of Nelson Rehmeyer, was a patient in the state hospital for the insane here for six weeks in August and September, 1923. This was disclosed here today by Edward M. Green, superintendent for the hospital.

Blymyer escaped from the local institution during a baseball game on the hospital grounds. His method of escape was never discovered and he was hunted unsuccessfully for more than a year. Then search was ended, for a hospital ruling makes escaped patients legally free after a lapse of one year from the time of "delivery," Green said.

TRUE BILLS EXPECTED IN MURDER

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—(INS.)—With the grand jury scheduled to indict three persons tomorrow in the slaying of Arnold Rothstein, the authorities were making an intensive search today for incriminating documents which which have disappeared from have disappeared from the gambler's files. It was hinted that the grand jury would indict those persons suspected of stealing the papers.

Authorities believe the missing documents will reveal secret transactions made between the gambling king and politicians and city officeholders. Rothstein is said to have made substantial loans to these persons and the authorities are anxious to learn what he received as his share of the bargin.

CHICAGO GUNMEN

The grand jury is expected to indict George McManus, former pal of Rothstein, and [illegible]o unnamed persons for the murder.

District Attorney Joab Banton hinted McManus's two companions were "professional Chicago gunmen."

McManus, who is the brother of a New York police lieutenant, is being held on a short affadivit charging him with first-degree murder.

"TOUGH WILLIE" CALLED

"Tough Willie" McCabe, held as a material witness, was to be called before the grand jury this afternoon. The prosecution is investigating his story that he was aboard a coastal steamer at the time of the shooting.

Another of Rothstein's gambling pals, "Nigger Nate" Raymond, probably will be released from jail today under reduced bond as a result of having supplied Banton with important evidence.

COBBLER SLAIN BY ROBBER

Victim of what he thought was a "joke" holdup, James Mascha, 42, Italian shoemaker, of Cornell and Center avenues, West View, died today in the Suburban General Hospital, Bellevue.

A stranger entered Mascha's shop Saturday night, and after tarrying a few minutes shoved the muzzle of a revolver against Mascha's side and said, "Stick 'em up, I want money!"

Mascha told police later he thought the man was only joking. He tried to push the revolver away and as he did so the robber fired a bullet into his abdomen.

The wounded man staggered to a barber shop nearby and reported the holdup.

Chief of Police William Resmeyer, of West View, and county detectives have only a meager description of the slayer.

PORTER OFFERS 13-MONTH CALENDAR

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—When Congress convenes today Representative Stephen G. Porter, of Allegheny county, will ask the lawmakers to reshuffle the calendar year into an arrangement of 13 months.

Porter's plea will be embodied in a resolution which he has ready to set before the House and Senate.

The Pittsburgh legislator's resolution represents the latest effort of the international movement to eliminate awkward weeks, uneven months and shifting holidays.

Among Porter's criticisms of the present calendar are these:

The months, quarters and half years are of unequal lengths; the calendar changes each year, hence the dates of periodical events never can be fixed precisely; the unevenness of the calendar disturbs commerce.

Porter's resolution calls upon the Congress to request the President to propose an international conference for the simplification of the calendar or to participate in such a conference.

The proposed thirteenth month might be inserted between June and July, taking 15 days from each month. The new calendar, Porter points out, in providing the extra month would inspire a more frequent turnover of money, a more regular schedule of paydays, so to speak, and eliminate such disappointments which occur when "the first" or "the fifteenth" fall on Sunday.

Lady Heath Fails To Set New Record

CURTISS FIELD, N. Y., Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Lady Heath, British aviatrix, circled over Long Island for two hours yesterday in an attempt to break her own altitude record of 19,300 feet, but apparently failed because of sub-zero temperatures she said she encountered.

When she landed an unofficial inspection of the sealed barograph indicated that she had flown slightly higher than 15,000 feet, although she said the altimeter had shown a height greater than 19,000 feet.

Lady Heath's flight was made in a diminutive gypsy moth plane which carried 20 gallons of gasoline. Her flying equipment included a helmet made from the skin of a leopard she had killed in Africa.

SEATTLE, Wash., Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Ezra Meeker, 97, one of the last of the survivors of the pioneers of the covered wagon area, died here this morning, after an illness of several months.

Meeker was born at Huntsville, Ohio, December 29, 1830. His father's people came from England in 1639, and the house they built in 1665 is still standing in New England.

Before he was of age he married Eliza Jane Sumner. They decided on the trip across the plains, which led to his career as a pioneer.

They left in 1852 on the hazardous trip across the Oregon trail. He settled in Washington as a rancher, near Puyallup, and rapidly increased his acreage, until at one time was the largest hop grower and exporter in the United States. Then came the hop louse, which wiped out his hops. With $80,000 damages, he lost everything.

SIN DISCUSSED IN GLORY BARN SERVICE

The Rev. F. F. Bosworth, evangelist of Chicago, made two addresses at the Glory Barn, Carson street yesterday afternoon and last night. Speaking on "The Significance of Salvation," at the afternoon service, he attempted to show that St. Paul was a pattern for all Christians in his fixed purpose and determination to seek his own salvation and later to work it out through his entire life. "Salvation is a life process," he said.

His evening topic was "The Fall of Lucifer." He read scriptures in effort to show that Lucifer was one of the marvelous creations of God's universe originally, and that his fall came about because of his self will to exalt himself as equal to God himself.

Evangelist Bosworth defined sin as being merely self-will, and the grosser acts of life are simply the symptons of diseased mind and heart. Christianity is positive, not negative, he said. The Chicago evangelist will remain at the Glory Barn all week, and tomorrow night will speak on "Christ, the Healer."

MARY E. BAKEWELL

Miss Bakewell, aside from having served a mission parish in Wyoming, has preached in numerous prominent churches. The fashionable St. George's Church, New York, was one of them. The white robe and headgear, which she wears here, is her own creation. She believes white is more appropriate for women preachers.

KNOWS RECTOR'S JOB, BUT CHURCH WON'T ORDAIN HER

All because the Rev. Mary E. Bakewell, of 262 Grant street, Sewickley, wears skirts, the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States refuses to ordain her and install her in a regular pastorate as is done with the gentlemen of the cloth.

And this, paradoxical as it may seem, despite the fact that Miss Bakewell is a bona fide graduate and a Bachelor of Divinity of Hartford Theological Seminary, Hartford, Conn., has served a successful ministry in a Protestant Episcopal Church in Wyoming, has preached in some of the leading churches throughout the country, and is willing to give her services without pay. She will not even shrink from such menial tasks as washing dishes after church suppers, dusting pews and tolling church bells.

Yet, this woman, who has bravely borne every rebuff from her ecclestastical male superiors, who have told her that her admission into the fold of the ordained clergy would establish a precedent and would violate the age-old traditions of the church, remains adamant in her determination to win proper recognition. In this she is not so much concerned personally as she is regarding the question of whether the ministry, as a profession, is to be open to members of her sex in the future.

CHURCH NOT READY

The Rt. Rev. John Gardner Murray, presiding bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States, frankly told Miss Bakewell that the church is not yet ready to admit her and other women.

"In an interview I had with him recently," Miss Bakewell said, "he candidly told me that my ordination and admission as a full-fledged minister would establish a precedent. He predicted, however, that in another decade the church would of necessity make the ministry available to women."

Miss Bakewell told of meeting with similar opposition from the Rt. Rev. Alexander Mann, bishop of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Pittsburgh.

"Since I returned to my home town, Bishop Mann has steadfastly refused to install me in a regular pastorate," she said, "despite the fact that I offered him my services without pay and wherever there might be a vacancy. Their discrimination against me, or rather against my sex, seems to me to be wholly unwarranted, especially since the canons of the church contain no provision prohibiting the ordination and employment of women as stewards of the Gospel."

Miss Bakewell is not rebellious against the ecclesiastical heads of her denomination. She fully realizes that her position and that of other women having similar ambitions bears the mark of novelty that a traditionalized denomination cannot possibly recognize overnight.

"Still, I am determined, not for myself so much, as for those members of my sex who would embrace the ministry as a career, to wage a militant, but dignified battle for recognition," she said.

MILITANT SUFFRAGIST

This is not Miss Bakewell's first battle for women's rights. As vice president of the Pennsylvania Women's Suffragist organization, she was one of the most militant leaders in Pittsburgh when the women of this state fought for the right to vote. For a number of years before she embarked upon her clerical career, she was active in many local social and civic movements.

Miss Bakewell graduated from Hartford Theological Seminary in 1924. Meeting with rebuff after rebuff in the East, she finally was given a small missionary pastorate at Lusk, Wyo. After one year and a half she returned to Sewickley, where she resumed her fight for recognition. For a time she occupied the pulpit of St. Stephen's Church at Sewickley, but now yearns to devote all her time and energy to Gospel work in some independent parish.

Miss Bakewell, a tall, distinguished looking woman of middle age, is the descendant of a long line of prominent Pittsburghers. She is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Bakewell. Her mother was the daughter of the late Rev. Dr. Henry A. Boardman, well-known Presbyterian minister of Philadelphia. Her sister is the wife of T. B. McKnight, vice president of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

AIR-RAIL SERVICE STARTS HERE VIA PENNSY MAY 1

The first coast-to-coast 48-hour air-and-rail passenger service, of which passengers from Pittsburgh may avail themselves, will be inaugurated next May 1. C. H. Mathews, Jr., assistant general traffic manager of the Pennsylvania Railroad, revealed this today at a gathering of railroad traffic men attending a luncheon meeting of the General Traffic Committee of the Chamber of Commerce.

The service will be operated by the Pennsylvania Railroad in co-operation with the Transcontinental Air Transport, Inc., of which Col. Charles A. Lindbergh is consulting aeronautical engineer.

"Pittsburghers who wish to avail themselves of the service," Mr. Mathews said, "board the American, Pennsylvania flier, early in the morning, reaching Columbus about 8 a. m."

"They are transferred to a 12-passenger Ford all-metal tri-motored plane which will carry them to St. Louis. After lunch the passengers continue by air to Kansas City.

"After a halt, a few more hours of flight and they reach Dodge City, Kan. Here passengers board a Santa Fe evening train for Las Vegas, N. M., where they start on their last lap of the journey the next morning.

"Los Angeles is reached in 48 hours after passengers leave New York, or less than 40 hours after leaving Pittsburgh."

Mr. Mathews said 10 planes had already been ordered.

"In their selection, the Pennsylvania Railroad has given primary attention to maximum safety and comfort," he added. "Veteran pilots will be in charge and special provisions will be made for getting latest weather reports. There will be emergency landing fields at frequent intervals along the carefully prepared routes."

What Doctors Think of the Laxative Habit

In all history, no Indian was ever known to have constipation. Nor need YOU. He chewed the bark of a tree called cascara. Today, we have the candy Cascaret.

Cascarizing the bowels never forms a laxative habit. If already formed, an occasional Cascaret will usually break the habit. For cascara strengthens the muscular walls of the bowels, and their need of any aid at all grows constantly less. What other cathartic has this characteristic? The writer knows of none.

An evacuation brought gently about by cascara will, nine times in ten, be followed by full functioning of the bowels on the morrow—and for days after. For there is no REACTION as with sickening salts, or any of the man-made purgatives that go through one's system like a bullet.

Physicians tell us cascara is the ideal laxative—and the tongue tells us candy Cascarets are its ideal form. At least a million people know this; what a pity there are any who don't! Especially parents; because children love to take a Cascaret. After which, for days-on-end, the bowels will be seen to work of their own accord.

The only habit from cascara is that of regularity! Cascarets tone and train the bowels. But at the first sign of returning sluggishness another Cascaret is as effective as the first.

There isn't a druggist who hasn't Cascarets, so WHY experiment with laxatives?

10 FLEE FIRE IN HOMESTEAD APARTMENT

Ten persons were forced from their apartments in night clothing and damage amounting to $26,000 was caused early yesterday by fire in a three-story brick apartment building at 138 East Eighth avenue, Homestead.

Most of the loss was suffered by a store and pool room on the first floor of the building. The cause of the fire, which started in the clothing store of Krell and Krause, has not been determined.

Stock in the clothing store suffered $20,000 damage and the store itself was damaged to the extent of $2,000, the owners say. A pool room conducted by John Yunko, suffered $3,500 damage. Apartments on the second and third floor were damaged to the extent of $600.

The family of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Kenny, composed of the parents and their three daughters, Lois, Elva and Fern, were routed. Marietta Evans, 16, was aroused by smoke and awakened her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Evans, her brother Leslie and Edward Hartz, 17, a visitor from Johnstown, Pa. All fled to the street scantily clad.

Fireman P. J. Herrington of the Central Fire Company was cut on the hand by falling glass. He was treated at Homestead Hospital.

During the fire, $50 was stolen from a cash register in Yunko's pool room, he told police.

TARBELL WINS POPULAR ART AWARD

Edmund C. Tarbell won the popular prize of $200 for his painting "Margery and Little Edmund," in the twenty-seventh Carnegie Institute international exhibition, according to the announcement made last night by Homer Saint-Gaudens, director of fine arts, after the vote had been completed. This is the fifth year that this prize has been won by an American artist. None of the paintings which were awarded prizes by the international jury received many votes from the public.

The nearest competitors of the Tarbell painting, in order of preference, were: "Betty and Gypsy," by H. E. Schnakenberg; "Evening," by Frederick J. Waugh; "Sweeping Crests," also by Frederick J. Waugh; "Aprilea," by Pietro Gaudenzi, and "Antonia," also by Gaudenzi.

The award was based on the votes of the visitors to the exhibition during the last two weeks.

The popular prize contest this year aroused a great deal of interest among the visitors to the exhibition. More than 5,000 votes were cast.

The ballots were counted by a committee consisting of Moorhead B. Holland, Porter Garnett and William Boyd.

The International Exhibition will close next Sunday. A week is allowed between the awarding of the popular prize and the close of the exhibition, so that visitors may return to see the popular prize painting.

Edmund C. Tarbell is very well known in Pittsburgh. He has been a contributor to Carnegie Internationals since the first one in 1896 and at different times has received all three prizes and medals.

Robber Gang Frees Girl Kidnaped From Auto

Katherine Evans, 30, of [illegible] Thirty-ninth street, was safely home today after having been kidnaped by four auto bandits yesterday. The holdup men accosted Miss Evans and Ray McKay, a neighbor of the girl, in Fox Chapel road yesterday. They robbed McKay of $12, cut the car's ignition wires and took Miss Evans in their own auto, releasing her a half hour later, because, one of them explained, they had "another job" on hand.

ENGINEERS O. K. BOULDER DAM

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3—(INS)—The Boulder Dam project is entirely feasible from an engineering standpoint, the special commission of engineers reported today.

The report was sent to Congress by the Secretary of Interior.

The engineers, appointed to survey the project, expressed a preference for a dam at Black Canyon, instead of Boulder Canyon, but declared both sites are feasible. A preliminary survey which the engineers submitted to President Coolidge last month had indicated the final report would be favorable to the project.

If the dam should fail, the report said, the flood created probably would destroy Needles, Parker, Blythe, Yuma and Permanently destroy the levees of the Imperial district, creating a channel into Salton Sea, which probably would be so deep that it would be impracticable to re-establish the Colorado River in its normal course. To avoid such possibilities, the report continued, the dam should be constructed on conservative, if not ultra-conservative lines.

COUPONS BRING BIG WELFARE RETURN

Indicating the willingness of the readers of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph to assist the cause of humanity and support the Welfare Fund, there was a big return of coupon subscriptions at the campaign headquarters in the Chamber of Commerce Building early today.

Many Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph readers who had already subscribed to the teams or in the house-to-house canvass made additional pledges or sent checks for a second donation. In other cases newspaper readers said that they had not been called upon in the regular canvass and were grateful for the opportunity to send a coupon subscription.

"The result of the newspaper campaign confirms the belief I have held that a very large number of people had not been asked to subscribe," said Augustus K. Oliver, chairman of the campaign. "They had waited patiently, and when no team worker or canvasser reached them they clipped a newspaper coupon and sent along their subscription. Their action is a compliment to the generosity of the people and the enterprise and public spirit of the newspapers.

"We have been listening to the click of the adding machines and talking about the methods of raising our budget, but we are still keeping in mind what these donations mean to the sick, the poor, the struggling mothers and the indigent children in the city and county whose lives will be made better and happier as a result of this campaign."

A score of auditors in the campaign headquarters today are speeding up their work to have it complete for tonight's reports. At a dinner in the William Penn Hotel ballroom, at which each chairman, team captain and ward, borough or township worker will pay for his or her own ticket, the reports will be read at 6:15 p. m. Nearly 1,000 invitations have been accepted for the dinner. It will mark the closing of the campaign.

Mikado Reviews 35,000 Soldiers

TOKYO, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—An imposing military review was held yesterday under a dull sky, which made it impossible to see all of the 35,000 soldiers, representing every branch of the military forces, who participated.

Emperor Hirohito wore the full dress black, scarlet and gold uniform of a generalissimo, and rode a prancing black horse. It required one hour and a half for the troops to pass the reviewing stand.

PAIR KILLED IN SUNDAY AUTO ACCIDENTS

A boy and a man were fatally injured when struck by automobiles near their home in different sections of the county yesterday. Each died a few hours after being admitted to hospitals.

Frank Cipetarell, 10, of 438 Broadway, Pitcairn, died of a fractured skull in Columbia Hospital last night. According to the morgue report, the lad was run down by an automobile near his home a few hours before. The driver's name was not learned by morgue attaches.

His legs crushed by the wheels of a coal truck at Seventh and Mill streets, Tarentum, Louis Miller, 59, of Fifth avenue, Tarentum, died in Allegheny Valley Hospital early yesterday. J. L. Stump, of Tarentum, alleged driver, was ordered to post bond for an inquest, deputy coroners say.

Our Daily Short Story

POLO LOVE

By EFFIE DELNORD.

It was not that he did not love Lila enough, simply that hardships and responsibilities had taught him to recognize the vague dream lanes that usually lead to failure. His love for Lila was clearly calamitous for his mother and two younger sisters, and in a pecuniary measure, for himself, too, but that did not make him a whit less eager for his wedding day.

He reflected as he walked along that it was unfortunate, when at last he was through college and was actually at work, helping to build the new dam, that he had fallen in love with one of the Mardens. He always had planned to do so much for his mother and sisters; they had sacrificed a good bit helping him through college. It was not, he decided, the Marden's poverty and overwhelming debts that was so hopeless, but their attitude. He despised bluff. They had no right to be living in that big house crumbling to pieces for lack of repairs.

A few years ago Lila's sister had married a promising young architect. Treve fancied that the young man had made a gallant struggle at first, but now he was thoroughly a Marden as if he and not his wife had changed his name. "A terrible thing," Treve thought, stamping along toward the Marden home, "to get used to debts. They welcomed me as heartily as if I had had a million. If they had planned a wealthy marriage for Lila it would have been one way out. By degrees I'll have to show them that I will take no part in this Marden bluff. I'll not weaken. Poor mother's afraid. Well, I didn't weaken tonight, did I?" The musical squeek of his corduroy breeches, his high-laced boots and flannel shirt gave him grim satisfaction in face of Lila's hurried telephone call—"to please dress for dinner, we have company."

The village school teacher masquerading in a maid's attire, who opened the door for him, caused Treve to smile.

Lila appeared at that moment from what the Mardens called the drawing room, very lovely in a very old evening dress.

He followed her into the so-called drawing-room where he saw a great deal of lace and brilliants and false hair, all of which belonged to a withered old woman who held up her lorgnette and regarded him coldly. Behind her chair stood what Treve called "a simpering fool with a glass stuck in his eye."

"Auntie, dear," Lila's voice was too high and sugary to be natural, "this is Treve De Geoffroi. Of course, you've heard about him."

Our Daily Short Story

Andre, you remember the De Geoffroi record, don't you?"

Lila's father, who had had a slight stroke, and her sister and her husband, and two dependent cousins all nodded, assuring him that Treve was the very one. Lila said sweetly, "You were so interested in polo, Auntie, I thought you might remember reading about Treve."

Auntie shrugged a pair of very old shoulders. Something annoyed her. Lila seemed to know what it was. "You must pardon his appearance, it's such a good joke on Treve, you know. The Governor insisted upon his seeing the new dam they are building, and Treve is something of an engineer himself, you know, and I suppose the truth is he forgot all about his dinner engagement talking with the French ambassador who was one of the party."

After dinner Treve strolled off in the garden and it occurred to him that it might be a good time to leave. Right down the road and forget the Mardens forever. He glanced back at the house. On the porch stood Lila very close to this fellow, Andre, engaged in what was evidently a very interesting conversation.

A moment later Treve was striding down the road, but he did not get very far, for the night was too full of yesterday when on this very lane he had wandered with Lila. "I'll be hanged if I don't pull her out of that nest of four-flushers! I'm going back there and tell the whole bunch a thing or two."

As he strode toward the porch, all full of anger purpose, Lila met him and just for a second slipped a very cold little hand into his, whispering, "Treve, please talk polo ponies to Auntie, if you love me'"

He did not know a thing about the game of polo, but he judged what he said for the next half hour must not have been very bad because Andre kept nodding his silly head or breathing loud "Ahs" every now and then.

When the foolish old woman, with her escort, left—in a car which Treve decided was not paid for, since she was a Marden—cackling something about hoping to see them on the Riviera, Treve thought bitterly, "Well, I fell without much of a struggle. Even that poor architect probably fought more valiantly."

"You didn't get my note?" Lila pulled him down on the porch steps as the family went in. "I explained—maybe it was just as well this way. You made such an exclusive, dignified impression. I suppose you noticed that she isn't all there, but long ago, she was a crafty, clever woman, who cheated Dad out of his inheritance. She's quarreled with all the other Mardens, I think, because they're all so poverty-stricken and she has nothing but contempt for poor relatives. She never could make us out, were we poor or had Dad gone her one better on that oil land? And for her sake we've held on to the silver service and the rugs because of her visits. This is the last. She's going to the Riviera, she thinks, but the doctors say she can't stand another ocean voyage; she's very, very old. Andrew—just Andre for her benefit—is our lawyer and incidentally hers. He trails along so nobody like a phony Princess Surut can get the oil gushers, which really should be Dad's. You see Andrew knows that she named me sole heiress. Not that I care a hurrah for the money when I'll have a wonderful engineer for a husband," she laid a soft cheek against Treve's, "but we want to pay back our obligations, trying to pretend debts don't worry one is rather awful."

Treve, before he kissed her, asked, "Does Andrew play polo?"

Lila laughed. "He doesn't know a mallet from a golf club."

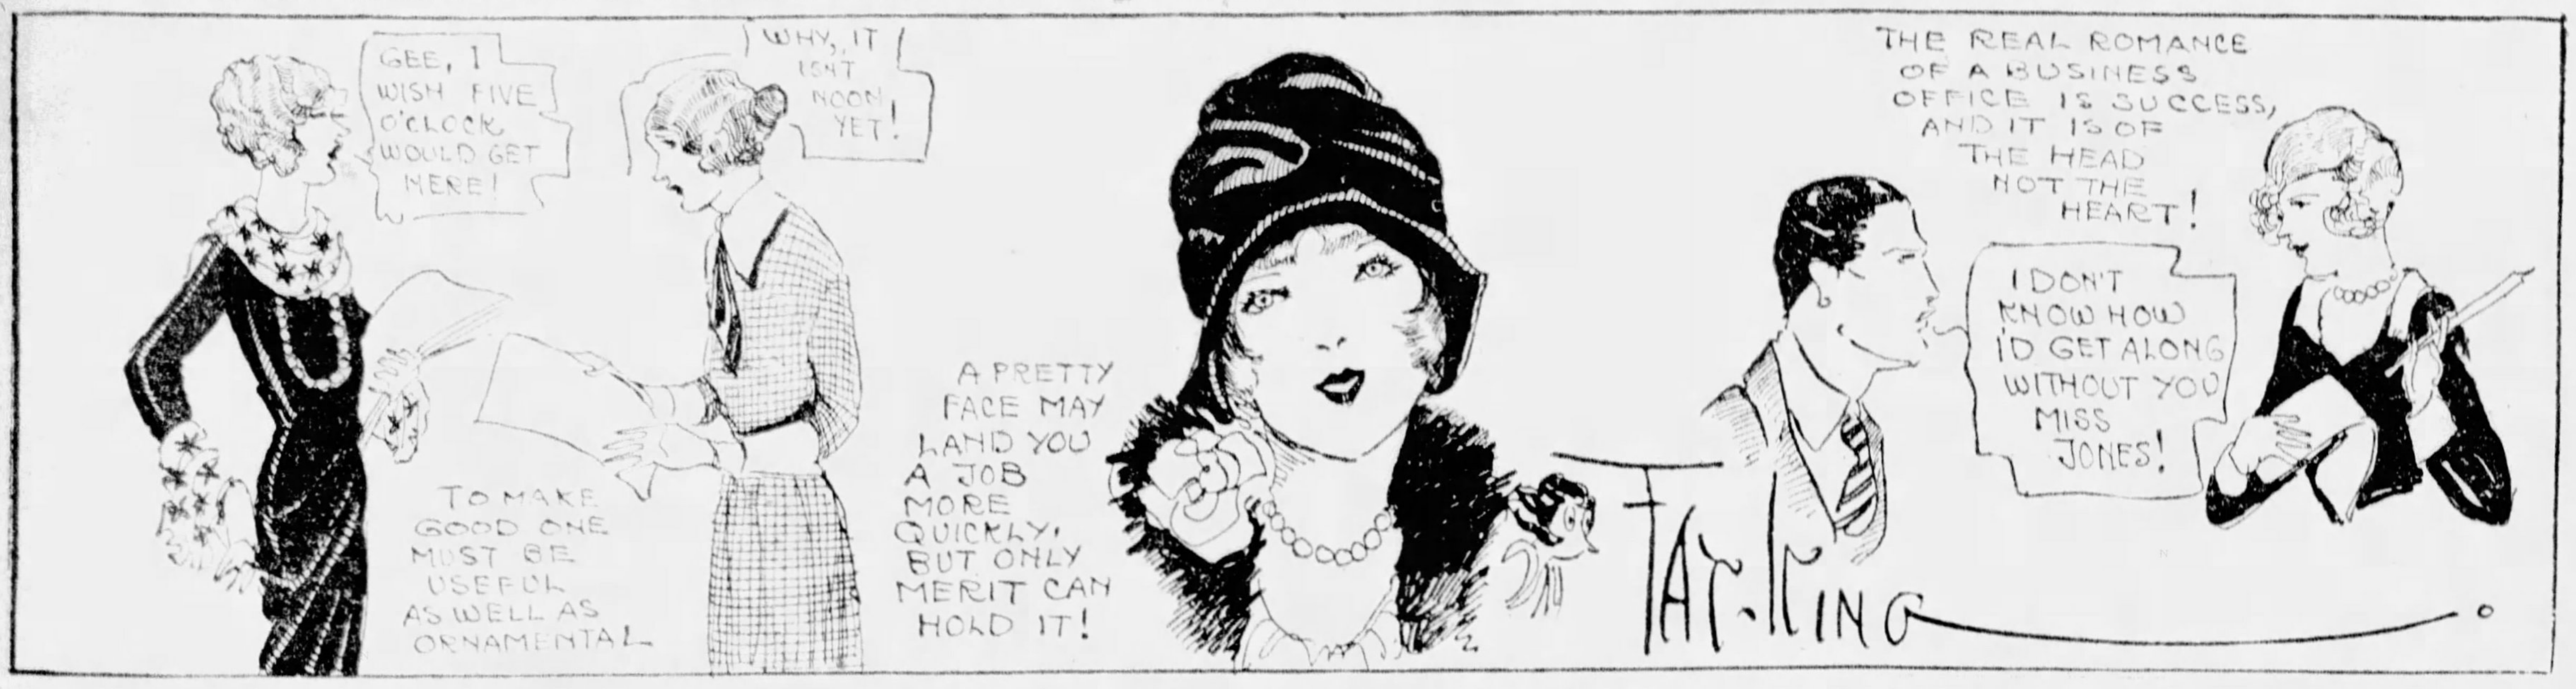
Pretty or Plain, Girls Must Merit Success in Business, Says Fay King



GEE, I WISH FIVE O'CLOCK WOULD GET HERE!
WHY, IT ISN'T NOON YET!
TO MAKE GOOD ONE MUST BE USEFUL AS WELL AS ORNAMENTAL
A PRETTY FACE MAY LAND YOU A JOB MORE QUICKLY, BUT ONLY MERIT CAN HOLD IT!
THE REAL ROMANCE OF A BUSINESS OFFICE IS SUCCESS, AND IT IS OF THE HEAD NOT THE HEART!
I DON'T KNOW HOW I'D GET ALONG WITHOUT YOU MISS JONES!
FAY KING

By FAY KING

IT IS true that a pretty face attracts favorable consideration more quickly than a plain one, but nothing succeeds like merit! One must be useful as well as ornamental to make good.

Many a pretty girl has found it easy to land a job but hard to hold one, because she was lazy and cared more about her appearance than she did about her boss' appointment calendar.

The real romance of a business office is success. The girl who keeps the routine of the office in her head makes more of a hit with her boss than the one who has romantic eyes.

A beauty must often work harder than a plain girl, to convince people she is as competent as she is comely.

FLAPPERS GET BLAME FOR U.S. CRIMES

"The four main causes of at least 80 per cent of the crime in the nation today are flappers, drugs, the Volstead act and the revolver," Rollo H. McBride, superintendent of the Parting of the Ways Home, North Side, said yesterday in his monthly address at the Allegheny County workhouse.

Twenty members of the Beechview Women's Civic Club who are studying crime, its causes and cure, sat on the platform with McBride.

"Flappers, in many cases develop into women of loose morals. They and drugs have been a source of much crime," McBride said.

"The non-enforcement of the Volstead act and the revolver have become aids to the development of many more criminals. The revolver as a result of non-enforcement of existing laws against its use and possession lends courage to the criminals.

"The only cure to crime from these sources, in my opinion, is the most strict enforcement of existing laws by honest officials," he stated.

McBride, as superintendent of the home, has received many prisoners from the workhouse and other local institutions after their release. He has been delivering an address each month at the workhouse for more than 14 years.

The Rev. William M. Buzza, prison chaplain, presided.

The prison chapel was filled with inmates who heard the address.

Autoist Is Fined On Girl's Charge

Young, Jr., 26, of 2797 Jane street, was fined $10 in Morals Court yesterday. Miss Myers fled from the machine to the automobile of three young men who were chased by Young from Becks Run road, through the South Side to Oakland, where he was arrested.

Weather Conditions.

A disturbance of marked intensity is centered over Lake Michigan this morning, lowest barometer reported 29.50, at Green Bay, and covers the Lake region, the Upper Mississippi valley and the Ohio Valley states. It is producing light rain and snow over the Lake region, but not far south of the lakes. The skies are celar in Southern Ohio and Indiana.

Following the disturbance is high pressure, with the center in Saskatchewan and a ridge extending southward over the Plains states to Texas and the Gulf states. The high is causing cold weather over the West, freezing temperatures as far south as Central Texas, and below zero in the Canadian Northwest and the border states. This high will cause below-freezing weather over this section Tuesday, probably 20 degrees or lower Tuesday night.

River Conditions.

The rivers are falling again everywhere in the district. The crest at Pittsburgh was 20.7 feet at 10 a. m. yesterday. Stage at Pittsburgh this morning is 18.7 feet; Dam No. 3, 11.7 feet, Dam No. 6, 19.7, and Wheeling Dam No. 12, 19.8. The rivers will continue to fall.

Symphony No. 5 in E Minor, Op. 64 .... Tschaikowsky
Andante—Allegro Con Anima
Andante Cantabile
Valse Allegretto Con Grazia
Andante Maestoso—Allegro Vivace

The Pittsburgh Symphony Society gave its second concert in Syria Mosque last night. The audience as before filled the auditorium and grows more enthusiastic about the Pittsburgh Orchestra after each performance.

Last evening's program was well chosen. The Wagner prelude might have been omitted and the concert thereby timed to more comfortable length, but the general effect was commendable. The cornerstone was the Tschaikowsky Fifth Symphony, less ponderous and depressing music than either his fourth or sixth. The playing of Dukes' Scherzo, the "Sorcerer's Apprentice" was most welcome, and for mere ideas put Goldmark's simple overture to shame.

Elias Breeskin, to whom so much credit for the organization of the orchestra is due, conducted the concert. His beat is firmer than before, which immediately reflected in the music, for the entire tone of the orchestra is steadier. With that accomplished he can study for more flexibility among his men. He played a very nice accompaniment to the violin concerto, keeping the tone to such reasonable force never to interfere with the soloist.

At the last minute Ruth Breton, violinist, replaced Efrem Zimbalist and proved a worthy and most attractive substitute. Her playing of the brilliant Mendelssohn Concerto was not only very musical, but she displayed a most charming feminine tone, albeit, full of verve. There is so much nuance in her playing, a most plaintive cantilena, and such a swaying motion to her rhythms; all of which is helped by a fine stage presence. It would have been just as well had she omitted the two insipid encores. Earl Mitchell play d the accompaniments for the last numbers.

WALL ST. POWER TO EARN HURT

lishes a value on the constructive efforts of industry."

Mr. Sloan's statement that "work is the fundamental way to create wealth" is illustrated by the rapid rise of General Motors Corporation to its present outstanding position in the industrial world. Many men who a few years ago held small blocks of stock in this company are wealthy today. It is the biggest profit-making organization in existence.

HUGE ADVANCE

Today General Motors stock is selling on the New York Stock Exchange at around $215 a share. There are 17,400,000 shares of common stock outstanding. At $215 a share this stock is worth today the staggering sum of $3,726,000,000. Contrast this with the situation only four years ago: In 1924 the stock of General Motors was selling at $70 a share and there were 5,800,000 shares of common outstanding, which would make the total value at that time $406,000,000.

The profits made by stockholders can be illustrated in another way: In 1924 there were 5,800,000 shares outstanding. Without asking for a penny from stockholders and without selling a single share of common stock, the big corporation split up its stock so that every person who held 100 shares now holds 300.

That was made possible by the piling up of surplus, due to the huge profits made over and above the cash dividends paid to the stockholders. This was the result of the enormous increase in earnings and the leadership of General Motors in the field of automobile production and world-wide distribution.

Any individual who in 1924 bought 100 shares of General Motors at $70 a share paid, of course, $7,000. Today he has 300 shares worth $215 a share, or $64,500. In the meantime he has received in actual cash dividends about half of his original investment!

SAVED WEAK CONCERN

Mr. Sloan speaks modestly of the achievements of General Motors and of his own personal ability in managing this giant corporation. He was born on May 23, 1875, in New Haven, Connecticut. He was graduated as a bachelor of science from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He was an engineer. He became associated with the Hyatt Roller Bearing Company, of Newark, New Jersey, a concern that at that time was on its last legs. When young Sloan went to work for the Hyatt people the company was doing a gross business of less than $2,000 a month. He ultimately became president, and under his management the business passed the $20,000,000 a year mark. He built the company up from a small, struggling concern to a profitable institution.

In 1916 when a number of accessory companies, including Hyatt, were grouped under one organization, United Motors, Mr. Sloan became its president, and in 1918, when General Motors absorbed United Motors, he became vice president of the parent company, in charge of all accessory companies. In 1920 he became operating vice president.

Not long afterward Pierre S. Du Pont, who had become temporary president, handed over the presidential reins to Mr. Sloan, and he has held that position ever since.

GROWS RAPIDLY

General Motors' employed capital has increased by the millions yearly under the Sloan regime. The company manufactures a variety of the best known automobiles in America. It has many tens of millions of dollars invested in accessory operations which contribute a reasonable return to the stockholders and, naturally, add to the profit account. The corporation manufactures roller and ball bearings for all purposes, including railroad cars, and electric light plants for farm lighting.

Through Fisher Bodies, General Motors build their own automobile bodies from beginning to end. The corporation owns timber tracts and saw mills. They carry the operations all the way from the forest to the dealer. They operate the Frigidaire, having about $40,000,000 invested in this company alone. They employ more than $50,000,000 in overseas automobile operations, in assembly plants and in merchandising abroad.

"Work — hard work, that's what counts," declared Mr. Sloan, concluding the interview.

YULE IN HOMELAND IS LURE THAT CALLS GRETA GARBO BACK TO SWEDEN

By REGINA CREWE.

(Copyright, 1928, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 3.

GRETA GARBO is actually leaving Hollywood. The Swedish film sensation has often threatened to return home. But this time she is really going. Greta plans to stay in New York for two days, and will then board ship for the old country. This means Christmas at home once again, after all the triumphs she has enjoyed since arriving here some three years ago. Although the day will doubtless be saddened by memories of her one-time sweetheart, Mauritz Stiller, the director who was instrumental in having Greta try her luck in American films, and who recently passed away.

Greta's friends have always said that she would never return here if once she got away. And Greta herself has maintained that she would prefer to live in Europe. But all this was while Stiller [illegible]. Now the officials at the Metro studio have no fear that Garbo [illegible] not return safe and sound after her vacation to resume the [illegible] starring schedule arranged for her next season.

Director "Woody" Van Dyke, Ramon Navarro and the rest of the boys who are [illegible] marooned in the South Seas filming "The Pagan," have cabled home that while Thanksgiving Day in Tahiti was bad enough, they'll be out of the tropical trenches by Christmas or know the reason why. The film fellows aren't so crazy about the romantic islands. In fact, if you mention romance to them in connection with the South Seas you'll hear that it's a "lotta baloney."

Dorothy Hall Tested for Role

THE papers have been signed, so the prophecy that William C. DeMille will make a screen version of the play, "White Collars," comes true. They say that Dorothy Hall, Broadway stage star, has taken screen and voice tests for the lead role at Metro's New York studios. She played the leading role during the run of the play, and, as she has had successful screen experience, her selection for this talker would seem logical enough.

It looks as though the day for the Crawford-Fairbanks nuptials is drawing near, if indeed they have not been already celebrated. Joan and her mother and young Doug and his mother dined at Joan's new home on Thanksgiving Day, and everyone seemed to approve of everyone else. Doug's mother, you remember, was the daughter of Daniel Sully, one-time "cotton king."

William Haines, Mary Philbin and Marie Prevost were all sent home from their respective studios to grapple with "flu" germs before the bugs got the upper hand of them. So far there have not been any serious developments on Hollywood's sick list. All the many patients report improvement.

"WHITE SHADOWS :: IN :: SOUTH SEAS"

Monte Blue has the role of a derelict physician in the tropics in "White Shadows in the South Seas," showing in the Penn this week.

"White Shadows" is an adaptation of the novel by Frederick O'Brien, filmed in the locale of the story, with native chiefs and others taking part in the action, this scene showing a native king, Monte Blue and Raquel Torres, who plays the role of a princess.

Monte Blue and Raquel Torres, in another scene in "White Shadows," which reveals phases of the pearl traffic, exposing the lives of those who dare death to obtain precious gems at the bottom of the ocean.

NEW SOUND DEVICE IN HARRIS

An invited audience witnessed the first demonstration of the photophone in Pittsburgh Sunday night in the Harris, which has installed this device for the projection of sound pictures. A photoplay feature and various short film specialties were used in the demonstration of the possibilities of photophone, which reproduces dialogue and sound synchronized to the action of the films with life-like fidelity. It was pronounced a success by members of the audience as well as officials of the Harris Amusement Company and those in charge of the installation, which is the first in a local theater.

Photophone is the name given to a device for reproduction of sound waves recorded simultaneously with the photographing of the action on the screen. Recorded on the film itself, instead of on discs, as light waves of varying intensity, the reproduction is exactly as originally registered by the source of the sound.

Although the Harris is the first theater here to have the use of photophone, other Harris houses, the Sheridan Square and Harris South Hills, are expected to be similarly equipped by the first of the year. Installations are now being made.

Spanish Dancer Comes Next Week

La Argentina, Spanish dancer, is coming to Pittsburgh for one performance in the Nixon, Tuesday evening, December 11, under the management of May Beegle. La Argentina's New York debut last month was followed by eight other consecutive performances. Before her departure for the Orient the first of the year, she will have given 15 more in New York. Pittsburgh is the only city outside of New York, Boston and Philadelphia in which La Argentina will appear this season.

MARY NASH IS STAR IN PITT

"The Command to Love," with Mary Nash, opens its Pittsburgh presentation in the Pitt tonight. Matinees will be given Thursday and Saturday.

Tonight Ziegfeld's New York musical comedy production, Marilyn Miller in "Rosalie," with Jack Donahue, will begin its second and last week in the Nixon. Miss Miller, Mr. Donahue, Bobbie Arnst, Frank Morgan, Margaret Dale and the entire New York cast of dancers and show girls are seen in the Pittsburgh engagement.

Vaughn Comfort acts as interlocutor in the Atlantic City Minstrels, booked to top the Keith-Albee vaudeville in the Davis this week. "Flying Romeos," with Charlie Murray and George Sidney, is on the screen.

William Hodge opens his engagement in the Alvin tonight in "Straight Through the Door," the mystery comedy in which he has enjoyed long runs in New York, Boston, Chicago and Philadelphia, and is playing a return engagement here. Matinees will be Wednesday and Saturday.

George Jessel comes to the Pitt for an engagement of one week, beginning Monday night, December 10, with matinees Thursday and Saturday, the vehicle in which he appears being "The War Song."

"My Maryland" opens one-week engagement in the Alvin, December 10. "My Maryland" deals with the patriotic love of a young "Barbara Frietchie" and the stirring days of 1862. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday are scheduled.

Struck by Woman's Auto, Man Dies

William H. Dickinson, 74, 341 Maple Terrace, struck by the auto of Mrs. J. L. Messmore, of Masontown, Pa., on Liberty bridge, a week ago, died Saturday in St. Joseph's Hospital.

KEN THOMSON RETURNING TO STAGE

Kenneth Thomson, Pittsburgh actor, who has been in motion pictures for two and a half years, is to return to the legitimate stage to play leading roles in the Charles B. Wagner Stock Company, which opens in Atlanta December 31. He is at present working in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, "Broadway Melody." Having recently finished "The Street of Illusions" for Columbia and "The Veiled Woman" for the Fox studio. "Broadway Melody" is also a talking picture and it is said that Thomson's voice records perfectly. He had five years' stage experience before going into pictures, his last Pittsburgh appearance being in the Nixon as Jack Absolute in the all-star cast of "The Rivals." Mrs. Kenneth Thomson, known professionally as Alden Gay, also will play important roles in the Wagner company in Atlanta. Accompanied by his wife and mother, Mrs. Edith Taylor Thomson, Mr. Thomson will leave Hollywood about December 10.

Takes the brakes off the pay-check

It's "clear track ahead" and smooth riding for Tracy, since he learned how to take care of himself after exposure to wet and cold. Other pay-envelopes may be short, docked from three to ten days, other men may be finding themselves out of work because of too many absences—but not Tracy.

The minute he has one of those vague feelings of ill-health; or chilliness, sneezing, or tickling in the nose and throat; he takes GROVE'S BROMO QUININE. He doesn't wait and wonder if he is going to get worse. He takes this time-tested precaution that will help him get better.

The two important things to do are: first, be sure that you are getting the genuine and original cold and grip tablets by emphasizing GROVE'S when asking for GROVE'S BROMO QUININE. Second, don't wait. Take these pleasant tablets early, when their laxative and tonic effect may help you to side-step the cold entirely. But early or late, take GROVE'S BROMO QUININE to fortify the system against grip, "flu", and other serious ills which often develop from a cold. Price 30c.

BUGS BAER Says

ROY CHAPMAN ANDREWS is back from the Gobi Desert with his Christmas presents for good little scientists and boys.

ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Roy has taken the sleigh bells off Santa's aviating mules and put them on the mastodonic mammal.

Among his gifts are big jaws, eight feet long. They will fit any argument.

Some very fine slab-like teeth, from a foot to 14 inches in spread. Also seven massive skulls.

Roy brought back some more dinosaur eggs of the duckbill iguanodon type.

This last item wasn't necessary as we have not yet cooked the last eggs brought back by Roy.

His prize discovery was a queer squintux 6,000,000 years old and about 30 feet long from tip to tail.

This animal is the old faithful womblatt. Whenever the womblatt got hungry it used to dash out and take the census raw.

The womblatt was the Airedale of the Gobi suburbs.

It was a one-man animal.

One man to a meal.

We do not think that the womblatt will fit our small apartments.

And a 30-foot animal is too bulky. Even if you can afford to feed it, how about parking space?

Some years ago, Mr. Bryan said that Roy was a tall professor, come down from the trees to frighten good folk off the sidewalk.

It's different now that Roy has brought back the womblatt.

He can have the sidewalk.

And we will take to the trees.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Visiting Guests at Dispensary Ball

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Snell, Jr., New York, visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. Shirley Austin, with their host, Mr. Austin, Mrs. Sidney A. Stewart, Mrs. George A. Kelly, III, and Robert Brigham, of Boston, stop for a chat between dances at the ball given by St. Margaret's Hospital dispensary board in the University Club.

Thanksgiving Social Pace Slackens

THE tempo of social activity characteristic of Thanksgiving week just couldn't be maintained. Especially with the gayest of all gay periods of the social season not far off—the Yuletide—everyone feels the need of a taste of quiet life, even if that quiet life is purely comparative. The uninitiated who survey the social calendar for the next few weeks, with something planned for every day, might think a bit of rest impossible for members of the social world. But the "400" has learned to introduce a sort of order into social life so that time might be allotted for rest and correspondence and reading. With practically all the pre-Christmas events announced such a habit of order is made possible.

And there's Christmas shopping to squeeze in, too, and other plans for the holiday in one's own family circle. Between luncheons and dances and debuts and shopping the buds are catching a few winks of beauty sleep so they may look their rosiest for the approaching gaieties.

MANY Pittsburgh society folks have just closed their Sewickley Heights homes, and opened their winter residences for the holiday period. A few members of the social world will be out of the city for the Christmas season.

Mrs. Andrew Elliott Maccoun, of Braddock, and her daughters, Carolyn, Mary and Martha, are already out of the city. They are in Baltimore, the guests of Mrs. Maccoun's parents, the Junior James Pareys. Mary and Martha Maccoun, I mentioned sometime ago, will come out at a ball in Baltimore on December 10.

The Maccouns will not return to Pittsburgh until after the holidays. Mr. Maccoun will join his family in Baltimore shortly before Christmas and will be in that city for his daughters' debut, I understand.

The engagement of Carolyn Maccoun to John Hanson Croker, son of the Edward J. Crokers, of Baltimore, was made known last month, don't you recall? Her wedding will take place in June at the summer home of the Maccoun family at Monterey, Pa., in the Blue Ridge Mountains.

WHEN mischievous Jack Frost, who likes to give a cold tweak to one's toes and fingers, arrives, and makes horse shows quite impossible, the different hunts are wont to think of balls. On January 11 all the nearby hunts will join in one great ball to be held in the William Penn Hotel. The five hunts of Western Pennsylvania are giving the affair—the Westmoreland, Rolling Rock, Sewickley, Pittsburgh and Indiana.

AND this hunts ball probably will be the climax to one of the gayest social seasons of the city. Shortly after that date the thoughts of the social world will stray to the remembered joys of Florida sunshine and the charm of the blue Mediterranean. And then will begin another exodus from the city. Pittsburgh will then be nearly deserted by the "400" until spring returns.

Miss Lois Pauline Hartman, as maid of honor, appeared in a bouffant frock of orchid taffeta, while similarly made gowns of taffeta were worn by the bridesmaids, Miss Mary Jewell appearing in yellow and Miss Zulette Ruth Tucker in green. They carried chrysanthemums. Alfred F. Vinal, of Cleveland, was best man, and the ushers included Raymond A. Tucker, brother of the bridegroom, and William L. Scott, of Detroit, brother of the bride. # SIDEWALKS OF PITTSBURGH

BY HAVEY J. BOYLE

JOHN HOOVER, of Uniontown, is a big game hunter. While most of his fellow-Pennsylvania-hunters go out after rabbits and deer in territory quite handy Mr. Hoover goes to such places as Nairobi, Kenya, wherever that happens to be, and looks for elephants and lions and apes.

Here are excerpts from a letter lately received by Mr. Hoover from a gentleman he has hunted with in far-off places, a gentleman who speaks as familiarly of elephants, lions, and such as the average hunter speaks of squirrels, rabbits, pheasants:

"If you desire to shoot in the Belgian Congo get all the papers necessary in Washington and then go to Brussels for point-blank permission. We would start from Nairobi, Kenya, via Tanganyika and across Uganda to the Congo. This is a trip never attempted so far by a hunting party. I have been all over the route on foot. We'll get some elephants in Uganda. I am afraid you cannot get permission to shoot gorilla at Kivu. However, we can get the apes in the French Congo on the west coast.

AND WE'LL GET LIONS- ELEPHANTS ETC. !
OH! - ER - I THOUGHT WE WOULD GO RABBIT HUNTING

"THE whole trip will include 2,500 miles of motor travel, but we will get a wide variety of shooting. One of the boys on your last trip is still here, but he is planning to go back to America. He has had a lot of fever lately and also had had trouble with the Mrs. I am feeling well; now planning just a few short trips for some lions.

* * *

"You would have to bring two light trucks with you. The heavy ones, I have found, are not quite satisfactory for the country we would go into. I expect the coming hunt with you to be my last one. I want to shoot a few lions and a big elephant and an ape, if possible. Africa is becoming badly civilized as there are a great many roads being pushed through by auto trucks."

* * *

WHAT we liked best about the letter was where the correspondent told about his friend who was having trouble both with the fever and with the Mrs. and that other part where he sorrowfully notes that Africa is becoming "badly civilized."

* * *

Mr. Hoover, by the way, has one of the largest exhibits of trophies of the hunting field in the country. Also, a great collection of pictures of native scenes on his rough journeys into the interior of Africa.

BILLY BRYANT, a showman, heard that Ruby Keeler was leaving the "Whoopee" company here and he took his small daughter, aged about 10, to the boss and said she could tap-dance as well as Ruby. The little girl was given the sign to do her stuff. The orchestra struck up, and with so many critical eyes looking on, the little girl instead of dancing had a good little cry. Even the hard-boiled musicians, who yawn at almost everything in the theater, found something rising in their throats.

* * *

Jack Donahue, the dancer, likes to tell of the time he was in Paris on a vacation. He attended a musical show and was recognized by some Boston friends in the audience. They urged him to "do his stuff." Well, Jack was just in the right mood—that was before prohibition in Paris—and he accepted the challenge. The boss of the show was delighted at the talent of the great American dancer. He wanted to sign him to a contract, but Jack told the boss he was just an amateur and danced for the fun of the thing. At that the boss almost tore his hair out, that is the boss' hair and not Jack's.

OH! - I JUST DANCE FOR THE FUN OF IT !
WHAT !?!

PRESENT DAY YOUTH DEFENDED IN PULPIT

Youth of today found a vigorous champion in the Rev. James Allen Keith, pastor of the North End Methodist Episcopal Church, who yesterday preached on the theme "Hell Bent."

"Let us scan their sins and their causes," said Rev. Keith. "What can be expected from young folks when their parents set the example by open defiance of law. It is not the youngsters, but the older ones that are to blame. The present high mark of young people in school work is not because the parents keep them home at nights to study, but because there still remains virtue and ambition in youth. But the youth of today cannot be fooled; he must be shown.

"The wonder of it all is that the children of this moonshine-mad age have remained so intensely human and approachable. They are not 'hell bent' any more than were their parents or grandparents before them. But as any learner needs sympathetic instruction, so the youth of this day needs help. It is not a challenge to parents. The sooner the parents get 'heaven bent' the sooner will they lead their children from the hell bent roads."

Speaking on the "Unpardonable Sin," the Rev. J. J. Allen, pastor of the Sandusky Street Baptist Church, said in part:

"The 'unpardonable sin' is the sin we won't let God pardon. This is the only unpardonable sin, as shown both by the nature of God and the nature of sin. God forgives unto the uttermost all who call upon Him. But we must call on Him and accept what He offers to us. People who are afraid they have sinned unto death are already in line for God's pardon. The knowledge of sin and the desire not to have unpardoned sin, is the hope of the sinner. A soul chooses to commit the fatal sin when there is refusal to turn from sin and accept forgiveness. As long as that attitude remains all sin is unpardonable.

"The unpardonable sin is not the result of God's unwillingness to forgive any sin, but because of man's willful persistence in sin. It is spoken of as 'blasphemy against the Holy Spirit,' and the 'grieving of the Spirit' because the office of the Spirit is to reveal truth. The truth of redemption in Jesus Christ comes to the believer through the Spirit. We choose darkness rather than light when we reject the truth God offers through the Holy Spirit. It is His only entrance into the soul. Shut the light of truth out and we shut God eternally out. Rejected truth can never be redemptive. 'How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation?' To maintain an intentional attitude of opposition toward God until the will is powerless to act against sin, or until God has no opportunity to grant forgiveness, is to commit soul suicide. Neglect produces hardness of heart and, finally, a state of religious coma is reached and the soul is doomed by its own choices. The Spirit of God is grieved because He would forgive unto the uttermost, but man refuses unto death."

TELEPHONE CO. PRODDED

Unless the Bell Telephone Company responds at once to action taken by the Wilkinsburg Borough Council, and reopens Hays street between Penn avenue and Wallace street and reconstructs the sidewalk in front of its new building, its permit will be revoked. ## FEUD BREAKS OUT ANEW AT SHANNON

Action by the Castle Shannon Borough Council in reinstating two policemen, Nathan Siskind and Joseph Susnick, recently "fired" by Burgess Thomas P. Delaney, has revived the feud existing between the Council and the Burgess. While no action has as yet been taken by the Burgess, it is intimated that if the officers persist in serving he may cause their arrest.

The situation is the culmination of months of friction. The suspension of the officers followed the action of Council in transferring all borough police cases to the office of Justice of the Peace Ira H. Edmundson, in Mt. Lebanon. This action, it was cited, was taken because Delaney was dismissing all cases brought before him. Delaney declares the policemen are given but $1 a year salary, the rest to be made up in fees which, in some instances, prompted the dragging out of the cases.

Threats to again suspend the officers, made by Delaney, has been met with the announcement by the Police Committee that it will keep on reappointing the men as rapidly as Delaney suspends them.

PITT STUDENTS HAVE OWN LOAN ASSOCIATION

A regular loan organization which grants small loans at the interest rate of 2% per annum only is being maintained by co-eds of the University of Pittsburgh for the benefit of self-supporting students, male or female, whose income from their labors sometimes is insufficient to defray their college expenses. This unique college activity is operated by the Student Loan Committee of the Women's Self-Government Association and has the sanction of the Dean of Women.

Loans of not more than $150 per semester are granted to a student. He can have the use of the money at 2% a year until he is able to repay it, either during his stay in college or after his graduation.

"Where does the loan committee secure its capital and how do you administer your business," Miss Thelma Buene, the chairman of the committee, was asked.

She explained:

HEY EARN MONEY

"Our funds are obtained by various benefits, such as dances and theater parties. Loans are granted to any student who can prove a prima facie need. He makes his application in writing, stating how he supports himself and giving two refernces. He is also required to carry at least $500 in life insurance. The application is then considered by the committee, which passes upon its merits. If passed, the chairman of the committee submits it to the Dean of Women and the president of the Women's Self-Government Association for final approval. Good character and high scholastic standing are the chief requisites for favorable action on an application."

The committee has already granted five loans this semester and 33 since its formation.

"Most of the borrowers repay their loans within one year after their graduation," Miss Buente said. "We find that those who apply for loans are boys and girls who usually make good after graduation, because they worked their way through college."

The committee is sponsoring a theater party at the Schenley Theater, December 10, proceeds of which will be applied to the loan fund.

Will Rogers Says

NEW YORK, N. Y., Dec. 3.

The Humane Society stops all cruelty to animals. Why don't they do something in this football situation, by making it an unlawful offense for a western college to assault, maim, and disfigure, the inmates of eastern infirmaries?

After meeting Stanford yesterday the cadets said: "Who took the Navy away from us and brought these instead? It's more government inefficiency."

Yours, WILL ROGERS.

Carroll Confesses His Love For Madge After She Poses for Him

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Madge Sayre, young and pretty, awakens on the morning of her twenty-first birthday resenting the dingy New York apartment she shares with her father, an unsuccessful inventor. Madge craves thrills and unexpectedly finds one when she attends a party given by her friend, Frances Storrs. It is in the person of Carroll Dudley, handsome artist, aviator and "man about town." Carroll is impressed with Madge's youthful beauty and tells her he had been waiting to meet her all his life. Meanwhile the party becomes wilder and Carroll and Madge retire to a balcony, escaping the heightening orgy. Carroll offers to drive Madge to his place on Long Island, proposing an airplane ride for a thrill. Leaving the party they stop at Madge's house when a taxi pulls up. Friends are lifting out the almost unconscious Mr. Sayre, a victim of alcohol. A week later Madge dines with Carroll at his luxurious studio apartment. After dinner they drive out to Long Island and Madge has her first thrill in an airplane when the engine stalls in mid-air and plunges toward the earth. After this near-experience with death Madge is supremely happy. Life is more intoxicating.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER V.

FRANCES looked earnestly across her desk at Madge. "Madge, I just introduced you to Carroll Dudley because I thought you might get an amusing thrill out of him. I know nothing against him, but I know people. You be careful. I'd never forgive myself if I were the cause of bringing you unhappiness."

They were interrupted by an office boy with a message that the head of the firm wanted to see Miss Storrs.

"I'll run," Madge said, "and don't worry about me, Frances—I think you've got Carroll wrong."

On her way downtown in a Fifth avenue bus, Madge argued with herself about Carroll. Perhaps Frances was right, she thought. Carroll was the type of man of whom to be wary. But another part of her argued keenly in Carroll's defense. How good-looking he was! And what a dear!

Madge felt certain that apart from mere thrills, Carroll was capable of an infinite tenderness. She felt that he was fine and brave and chivalrous—the type of man for whom she had been subconsciously searching. That he was a devil in his way, that her beauty attracted him, only added to his charm, and besides and beyond all this, was he not the most thrilling person Madge had ever encountered?

Carroll greeted Madge eagerly when she entered the studio, laughingly, he led her by the hand up to a big, nearly-finished portrait.

"That's the old walrus from Pittsburgh I was telling you about," he grinned in his ingratiating way. "She's paying me ten thousand cold iron men for this monstrosity. She's paying me so, Ecstasy, beautiful as you are, can you see how much more beautiful you appear in the eyes of a mere artist who has been looking at a face like this all morning?"

"But he rattled on. "you wanted to look at the stuff I really like—the stuff that has given me some slight name. Sit here," and he placed her in a high backed armchair and brought a footstool for her feet to rest upon.

Placing an easel in the correct light, Carroll brought out some half-dozen canvasses, and Madge gasped at the sheer loveliness of his work. They were all of girls radiant in their beauty. Madge, who was quite conscious of her own allure, wondered where he could have found such exquisite models, as she noted the flesh tints ranging from olive to the white of a moss rose.

"Where did you find such beauty?" she asked breathlessly.

"Some of them were quite lovely," he acknowledged, "but I admit that I idealized most of them." He paused, looking at her adoringly. "With you I feel the other way. Ecstasy! I am frightened—scared stiff that I will not be able to do you justice, because, you know," and here he came and knelt by her side, looking pleadingly into her eyes, "you're going to be a darling and help my career by posing for me after lunch."

Madge knew an almost uncontrollable impulse to stroke his hair as he knelt beside her. The joy of inspiring an exquisite picture went to her head like wine, so subtle was the flattery implied.

"Help your career? But you remember our condition, Carroll? No one but you and I are ever to see it when it is done! Promise? Cross your heart?"

"By your beauty, I swear it, Ecstasy."

"Then, if no one can see it, how would it help your career?" she asked reasonably enough.

"Because, little lawyer, to paint beauty in its highest form must of necessity improve that technique of the artist, and I shall never be sufficiently grateful to you."

"Never break your word to me," Madge warned him, as Hardy entered to announce that lunch was served on the balcony.

"Come and lunch with the most famous painter in the world," Carroll smiled, as gaily he offered her his arm. "I am going to be that, you know, once I have painted you."

It was with a little feeling of power that Madge sat at lunch with him. Wonderful enough to be young and beautiful and to be eating delicious food under an awning on a balcony that overlooked the green of Central Park; but still more wonderful to have it in her power to inspire an artist, to help him climb to heights as yet unrealized! And added to all this, the partly unconscious thrill that his very presence gave her made that luncheon a memorable repast.

"Hardy," Carroll instructed at the end of lunch," you can go out this afternoon."

Madge smiled gratefully.

"No one can enter the studio," Carroll explained, "from the servant's quarters once one door is locked, but I thought you would feel more comfortable if I sent him out. Now," he went on in a purposely matter of fact voice, "will you go up to that room you used before? You will find a model's cloak up there—a new one that I ordered especially for you."

As Madge went up to the little staircase leading to the bedrooms above there was a little glow of appreciation in her heart for Carroll's thoughtfulness.

Slowly she undressed, surveying her reflection in a huge mirror. She imagined that loveliness captured on canvas, and while she was shy, at the same time the thrill remained.

She wrapped herself in the cloak of black velvet which she found laid over the bed, and then slowly made her way back to the studio. Cautiously Madge descended three of the stairs. Then she paused, pulling the black velvet tighter about her lissom form. She closed her eyes and a tremor ran through her. Could she? One foot felt backwards for the step above her. It was not too late to retreat.

Two more steps down and again she paused as doubt assailed her. Hadn't she read or heard of girls who had done just this—later so bitterly to regret it? But then Carroll—why, Carroll was different; and with sudden determination, Madge ran down the rest of the stairs and entered the studio where Carroll was waiting her.

To her relief, his manner was entirely professional. He hardly seemed to glance at her, and it was obvious that at the moment he was all artist, while the mere man seemed to be absent.

"I think I would like to have you lying on that couch," he said quietly. "Just rest easily on it, one arm above your head. You see what a gorgeous royal purple that silk is, and I think it will make a very striking background."

Obediently, Madge reclined on the purple couch, and Carroll was careful not to come near her. Instead, he stood behind his easel and issued instructions of exactly how he wanted Madge to pose. A little to the left. The right arm a little nearer the wall. He made it an absolutely prosaic proceeding, so that shyness and embarrassment left her, and she began to wonder why she had made such a fuss about such a very ordinary affair.

For half an hour or more, as the pose was an easy one to hold, Carroll worked busily with charcoal, roughly sketching in the outlines of the figure. Then he paused.

"Let's rest," he suggested, and Madge gathered the cloak again about her, reflecting that in it she was more modestly dressed than she would have been in a swimming suit on a beach.

She got up from the couch and moved towards the easel.

"Can I see?" she asked.

"It won't do you any good," he smiled. "Look if you want to. But it won't be interesting until I begin with oils. I would prefer that you didn't see it until it is nearly finished."

"All right, then. Have it your own way," Madge smiled. She turned, and walked toward a chair, when suddenly he stood beside her.

"Ecstasy!" he whispered, his eyes gleaming.

"No! No!" Madge breathed, feeling that in his attraction lay her danger. The feeling of power she had had over him suddenly deserted her. She felt helpless, and yet strangely thrilled.

"Ecstasy! I love you so! I love you so!"

His arms were about her, and he drew her close to him.

Madge closed her eyes. She seemed drowning in a sea of rapturous emotion. His lips met her, and in the intoxication of that moment, Madge was conscious only that she was supremely, inexpressibly happy.

THE first snow of the season! And how she revels in the soft white flakes which so caressingly fall against her cheek. And, too the first snow flurry brings the first heart flurry to Him who has long waited for Love. How can he resist her now?

She knows, the little witch, how lovely she is, and she knows, too of the heart flurry which the poor man is suffering. But laughingly, she pursues her way, for she knows that sooner or later the gale is going to blow her straight into his arms, and then—well all that will matter will be the heart flurries that will end in Love and Happiness.

So watch the snow flurries, for they may bring you the love for which you have been waiting. Who can tell?

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Hardened Arteries Not Rated a Disease

I FIND in my mail a letter from a lady in Pennsylvania. She asks me three questions, about hardening of the arteries, sleeplessness and neuritis. I assume that this lady is suffering from all these symptoms. She may regard them as three separate and distinct ailments. As a matter of fact, all of them might be due to the same cause.

DR. COPELAND

Hardening of the arteries cannot be regarded as a disease. It is merely one of the symptoms of a manner of living which has not been entirely proper. Carelessness about the eating, neglect of the bowels, failure of elimination by the kidneys — these are other symptoms resulting from the manner of living which is responsible for the trouble with the arteries.

If we were to live close to Nature, keeping all of Nature's rules, I suppose we might live on for a hundred years or more, possessing all the functions and capable of all the activities of youth. The very fact that we do not live to such an age, and in advanced age do not possess such health as I have indicated, is our fault or the fault of our parents.

The system must have an ample supply of the various substances which are used in the tissues of the body. Not alone must it have an ample supply, but it must not have an over-supply. If too much of a given mineral is constantly fed, there may be a deposit of the surplus in some part of the body. In this way the artery walls may be overcrowded with the mineral supply.

If the intestinal tract is not properly cleansed, there is decomposition of the fecal substance. Poisons are developed and these are carried by the blood stream to every part of the body. Some of these poisons may be stimulants which excite the brain and interfere with sleep.

Nine times out of 10, persons who suffer from sleeplessness are constipated. There is no relief for the sleeplessness until the constipation is overcome.

Poisons developed in the body either in the intestinal tract, or in the tonsils, or the teeth, or the gall bladder, may be carried to the nervous system. As the result, there may be an inflammation in the nerve. This is called "neuritis."

To avoid hardening of the arteries and sleeplessness, and neuritis and headache, it is important to have free elimination from the intestines and kidneys. It is important to make sure there are no centers of infection. It is important to live in such a way as to get a right amount of good food, fresh air, sunlight and exercise.

Answers to Health Queries

A. R. Q.—What will relieve the pain caused by gall stones? What will clear up the condition? How long can a patient suffering from gall stones live?

A.—Application of heat and corrective diet should bring about increased comfort. Careful diet and general care, such as avoidance of constipation, proper exercise, etc., should all bring about results. Indefinitely.

LOVE'S AWAKENING

A Continuation of Love's Embers

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge's Father Decides to Quit His Life of Peril

MY father put his arm around me and drew me close as I voiced my almost hysterical plea that he take no more of the dangerous mysterious journeys which his work in the diplomatic branch of the secret service had made imperative for him during the years since our reunion.

"Did they affect you so much, my darling?" he asked, contritely.

"Oh!" I shuddered against him. "You never will know how much. I never have told you because I didn't want to hinder you. I felt as if I were a soldier's daughter, and indeed I was. But surely—generals retire, don't they?"

He laughed indulgently.

"Yes, and so did I, once, as you remember."

"But they held you in reserve," I rejoined, "and it seems to me that you've been busier than you were ever since that time."

"That is true," he admitted. "But there has been a sort of tacit agreement that when this last job was completed, I could shake off responsibility except for consultation in an emergency. And thanks to Underwood, I believe I shall be able to take a real rest.

"I am still bewildered by the discovery that he has been 'K. seven,'" he said, "the man who has kept our whole department agog with baffled curiosity all these years. And yet, now that his secret is known, I realize that always when I have received messages from that mysterious figure, I have been haunted by a sense of something familiar about the bizarre phraseology in which he couched the notes. Well! he certainly has earned immunity for the rest of his life and has expiated every whit of that old crime. This last exploit of his has helped to cut out a cancer very near the heart of our body politic and that of other countries.

"You see, dearest," he went on, "while we always have with us a certain type of fanatical revolter against things as they are, we have been troubled since the war by a new type of conspirator, the criminal of high mentality, with contempt for authority and lust for power who will stop at nothing. Men of this type, some of them in unbelievably high places, formed a band whose outlawry was as fantastic, but far more vicious than Robin Hood's. The assassination of rulers and the wiping out of cities upon a certain day if huge sums of money were not forthcoming—these were their plans. The rounding of them up sent me on that last voyage of mine and Allen Drake and I came back marked men. I can tell you now, my dear, that if it had not been for Harry Underwood's help, and your ability to decipher that code message, you might have been minus—what is them odern phrase?—'a perfectly good father.'"

"Don't " I adjured him, catching his hand.

"No, I won't jest about it," he said, "but you must believe me when I tell you there is no more cause for you to be concerned. Those devils were implacable, but they have been effectually dealt with, and if I do not die until they cause my taking off, I shall live to rival Methuselah's claim. And unless there's something as grave as a war, I shan't leave the farm except on pleasure trips any more. Shall I tell you a secret?"

He was flushing like a schoolboy, and I felt a sudden fantastic fear. Surely he was not thinking of—

"Oh; of course," I forced myself to say.

"I'm writing a book," he said, and I breathed again, "the history of some of our cases, for a very limited circulation, the members of the service of other countries. They have been pleased to say that our methods were worth copying, and I have been asked to do the work. That is what I meant when I told your mother-in-law I must be treated as a guest."

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Tuesday, December 4

THE idereal influences for this day denote the necessity for both patience and endurance in many important connections, while at the same time they hold the compensatory presage of pleasant and flourishing conditions in heart and home activities. There may be some sensational developments in this direction. Be careful of the employment and diligent in industry. Also be careful and provident with the finances.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of contradictory experiences. Home and heart affairs flourish and bring compensations for trials in employment, in business, and possibly in finances. Be on guard in these directions.

A child born on this day may have many social graces and domestic virtues, but may find success a generally uphill game to be conquered by resolution, patience and perseverance.

Endurance is the crowning quality and patience all the passion of great hearts.—Lowell.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Announcing Yourself

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

We would greatly appreciate a ruling on the following bit of social usage as applied to local club life.

A. claims that it is quite correct to identify himself as Mr. Adams to the telephone switchboard operator or when asking for a number from a room in the club. It is necessary to give one's name so that the telephone call may be properly charged.

B. claims one should simply say "Adams speaking" and omit the "Mr." entirely.

We have discussed this pro and con and finally decided to refer the question to you for final judgment.

CLUBMAN.

"MR. ADAMS" would be by far the better form. "Adams speaking" is too curt and unnecessarily so, for this certainly takes longer to say than "Mr. Adams."

The telephone operator would be expected to say "Mr. Adams" and this point of view should govern one when giving one's name over the telephone. That is, as a general rule, we use to the person the form of the name that is appropriate for that person to use. That is why, for instance, we say, when a maid answers the telephone, "This is Mrs. Allington," whereas if a sister of the hostess answers the telephone we say, "This is Mary Allington."

"Mr. Adams"—the club members should, by all means, use this form for it has the necessary dignity and quality that it should have.

Thank you for the honor you gave me in letting me talk over the question with you. I appreciate it deeply, sir!

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

What Men Don't Know About Women

ENGLISHMEN, according to the marriage records, are choosing riper brides this season. They have discovered that the green peaches in the garden of love disagree with them, and are no longer marrying flappers.

* * *

One first-class passage to Liverpool, please, and a deck stateroom!

Those Englishmen may not be so up-to-the-moment on "onions," and slang, but they KNOW their WOMEN!

HELEN ROWLAND

The American man knows lots of things. He knows business, politics, dancing, athletics, machinery and golf and can give the average Englishman points on most of them.

But there are a hundred things he doesn't know—and ninety-nine of them are WOMEN! What he doesn't know about the unfair sex would fill a city library.

* * *

He doesn't know how to judge women, how to choose them, how to make love to them, how to manage them, how to hold them—or even how to get rid of them! In matters of love and marriage, he is an ostrich with his head in the sand—continually fooling himself.

* * *

Ever since the war brought on such epidemics as the "flu" and the flapper, he has been blindly following the youth-cult, and picking a life-mate from the Baby Parade at Asbury Park.

"Nothing over twenty!" is his slogan. And as for thirty—that is "positively senile!"

No wonder girls are rushing breathlessly into marriage—and breathlessly out of it, again. They are in a positive panic, for fear they may be left hanging on the family tree, when they are tottering toward twenty-five.

* * *

Yet, from twenty-five to thirty-five is the most attractive age of woman, when her heart is tender and mellow, her mind is rich and interesting and her physical charms are all ripe and still perfectly fresh. When she has shed most of youth's selfishness and intolerance—and still retains all of its illusions and charms.

* * *

Flappers in their teens are no more fit for marriage than these hard, flavorless, pale-pink watermelons you eat in northern hotels are fit for the market. And they are just as apt to DISAGREE with you.

* * *

Yet, oceans of undeserved pity are wasted on the man who is "married to the wrong woman"—the rich man who has been caught by a baby gold-digger, the brilliant man who is tied to a rattle-pated little moron, the man who wakes up to find himself tied for life to something beautiful-but-dumb, who bores him to death in six months. I wonder why! As long as a man keeps his head in the sand, and marries on an impulse, his wife is his own FAULT!

Constantly we are finding new and better ways of doing things

THE new Ford was a good car when it was first introduced. It is a better car today. Constantly we are finding new and better ways of doing things. Ceaselessly, untiringly, our engineers are working for the improvement of the car. Every new idea that seems to promise advancement is studied and tested in every conceivable way.

Not only in the laboratory, but out on the road in actual running. As soon as we are sure of its value we put it into the car.

The result is an automobile that is always new. There is no such thing as saving improvements for a yearly model designed to speed up sales or capture a passing fancy.

No matter when you buy a new Ford—in January, May, August or December—you know that it embodies every latest development that has proved sound and good.

You know more than this. You know that in design, materials and workmanship it is the best car that can possibly be made at a low price. The deciding thought behind every move is not sales or profits—but "What will give the most service to the public?"

Our whole effort is toward simplicity—to give you complete, well-rounded performance with the least amount of machinery and without sacrificing quality anywhere along the line. You cannot make a complicated car at a low price without cutting corners somewhere.

The new Ford is a truly great car because it brings you a proved, sensible balance of every essential feature of an automobile. No one part has been over-developed at the expense of another.

You get remarkable acceleration and smoothness at all speeds. You get speed of 55 to 65 miles an hour. You get uncommon power and hill-climbing ease. You get reliability and economy of operation that will save you many dollars in the up-keep of your car.

You get more than this . . . a fully enclosed, silent six-brake system—four Houdaille hydraulic shock absorbers—Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield—the full and immediate advantage of many improvements developed exclusively by the Ford Motor Company.

Arrange now to see the new Ford and know the thrill of driving it. Judge it not only on acceleration, power and speed, but also on safety, comfort, ease of control, reliability, economy—on its long life and the security of its trade-in value.

You will know then that today, more truly than ever before, there is nothing quite like the new Ford in design, quality and price.

FAR-WEST FOOTBALL UNDERRATED

IF THERE was one detail of Pop Warner's fine coaching that stood out more impressively than another in Stanford's sensational 26-to-0 victory over the Army in New York Saturday, it was the presentation of a defense that was capable of stopping the great Red Cagle. No other coach was able to keep the Army from scoring this year, and no other coach succeeded in holding Cagle in check as effectually as did the former Pitt mentor.

Red Cagle

Cagle played a splendid game at that, his clever passing being the only thing that kept the Generals in the picture, but Warner had drilled his linemen and ends so perfectly for the occasion that only two or three times did the star of the Generals find it possible to get away for runs of any distance.

WITH all due respect to the ball-carrying ability of Hoffman, Fleishhacker, Wilton and Sims, Stanford's powerful line was the main factor in the triumph of the Westerners. When Warner's forwards were not breaking through on defense and smothering Cagle, they were opening huge holes on attack through which their own backs were able to dash without trouble.

The crushing of the Army by such an unlooked-for score goes to prove that Pop still must be given his old ranking as one of the greatest coaches that ever lived when it comes to winning a particular game upon which he has centered his attention. His teams are beaten at times, like all others, but when the veteran makes up his mind to win a certain contest he comes pretty close to being a safe bet on that day under any conditions.

SATURDAY'S conquest in New York after bringing his men across the continent concluded Warner's fifth season at Stanford, and during that period he has made a record that keeps him in the place he long has occupied among the greatest coaches of this or any other time.

In 1924, his first year in Palo Alto, his team won seven games, lost one and tied one, drawing with California and being defeated by Notre Dame.

In 1925, Stanford won seven and lost two, the defeats being administered by the Olympic Club and Washington.

In 1926, the Cardinal went through unbeaten, winning 10 games and tying one, the draw being played in the post-season event with Alabama.

In 1927, the team won eight, lost two and tied one, losing to St. Mary and Santa Clara and being held even by Southern California.

This year it won seven, lost two and tied one, drawing with California and losing to the Olympic Club and Southern California.

For his five years on the coast Warner's record is 39 games won against only seven lost and four tied.

LOCAL hockey fans are hoping that, when the special meeting on the Roy Worters case and the proposed deal with the New York Americans is held in Gotham on Thursday, not only will League President Frank Calder lift Worters' suspension and sanction the shift, but that the American management will reconsider its first decision and consent to let Normie Himes come here in addition to the outright release of Joe Miller, in exchange for the Pirate goalie. It was demonstrated in the four games played last week, of which the Bucs lost three and tied one, that the Cleghorn troupe is in sore need of a dependable goal shooter, and Himes would supply the need nicely, judging from the form he has been showing this season. New York fans are still raving over the goal shot by Himes against Ottawa last week as the most sensational of the present league race. Taking the puck from Simpson near his own goal, Normie worked it down past the wily Finnigan, brushed past the burly Clancey and flipped the disc right into the cage before Connel could make more than a gesture.

Norman Himes

AFTER the manner in which the far West has mopped up with the East in football this fall, some of the Eastern "experts" who have been unable to see beyond the boundaries of their own region, or past the Big Ten Conference lines at the outside, may be brought to a realization of the fact that it is about time for them to quit kidding themselves.

Look back over the annual flocks of All-American selections through a long period of years and you will find that the Eastern builders of mythical teams awarded the great majority of the honor places to Eastern players, with occasional recognition of mid-Western performers, unmindful of the possibility that out on the Pacific Coast there might be a number of gridders as good or even better.

DO YOU know how often, or how seldom, the late Walter Camp named a Coast player on his first All-American eleven in all his years of picking? Just twice. And the same player got the award in both instances. Camp started the All-American custom in 1889 and kept it up, barring the 1917 omission on account of the war, until the time of his death, following the season of 1924. He did not award a place even to a mid-Westerner until 1903, when Willie Heston, of Michigan, could not be denied, and it was not until 1921 that the Coast was given a tumble. Then Brick Muller, the great California end, was named on the first team, and he was picked again in 1922. No other gridder roaming the Pacific slope ever was picked by Camp.

In recent years there has been a tendency on the part of some critics to broaden the thing a bit, though at that the Coast has received only a small percentage of the awards. But look at this year's developments. The Oregon Aggies came East and smashed the mighty New York University machine on Thanksgiving Day, 25 to 13; Stanford made the long trip and routed the Army last Saturday, 26 to 0, and on the same day Southern California walloped Notre Dame, 27 to 14. By this time it ought to be clear to anyone with half an eye that not all the star football players are bred in the East or the middle West.

JIMMY McLARNIN, with a great knockout record behind him and hailed as a coming champion, failed to come through when he got his title chance against Sammy Mandell, so it does not necessarily follow that another fighter able to beat McLarnin would also be capable of dethroning Mandell. However, the decisive manner in which Ray Miller, of Chicago, defeated McLarnin in Detroit last Friday night, punishing him so severely that Jimmy failed to come out of his chair for the eighth round, convinced most fight followers that Miller is at least entitled to a chance to meet the champion.

Ray Miller

THE boy who easily withstood McLarnin's vaunted kayo fists and gave him such a terrific beating that Jimmy was forced to quit under the savage assault after the seventh round, showing every sign of being an exceptionally good two-handed battler, with power as well as speed in his punches with either hand.

Had Miller won by a one-punch knockout it might have been called a chance blow and his victory would not have been so impressive, but the manner

GRIMES RANKED THIRD

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Jim Bottomley has smiled and batted his way into the hearts of the committee choosing the National League's most valuable player for 1928. His reward is a trophy and $1,000 in gold.

Bottomley's selection, announced last night, brings new honors to the cagey Cardinal first baseman, who was a big factor in the two pennants his team won in the last three years.

Pressing Sunny Jim hard for the award was Freddie Lindstrom, of the Giants. Bottomley received 76 votes and Lindstrom 70. Bottomley was within four points of the highest possible total, but if any one of the eight committeemen had made a decided change in his ballot Lindstrom would have won.

The committee, consisting of eight baseball writers, voted before the last world series. Burt Whitman, of Boston, president of the Baseball Writers' Association, announced the result.

21 CONSIDERED

Twenty-one other players received votes, as follows: Pitcher Burleigh Grimes, of the Pirates, 53; Benton, 37; Critz, 37; Traynor, 28; Hack Wilson, 21; Hogan, 17; Jackson, 16; Maranville, 14; Vance, 13; Hafey, 11; Hornsby, 10; Hartnett, 6; P. Waner, 5; Richbourg, 5; Douthit 5; Bissonette, 3; Flowers, 3; Jimmy Wilson, 3; Whitney, 2; Ford, 2; Thompson 1.

Players named in the honorable mention list are: Frisch, Sisler, Stephenson, Heathcote, Bancroft, Haines, Reese, Maguire, Walker, Welsh, Petty, High, Alexander, Sherdel.

Six full years of faithful work brought Sunny Jim the award. Ever since he broke into big league baseball with the Cardinals in 1922, Bottomley has been a terror at bat and a great defensive man afield.

His six-year batting average is .330. He is a front rank player in distance hitting, and this year he tied for home run honors, led the league in triples with 20, and placed second in doubles with 42. Bottomley's homers for the season total 31, the same number Hack Wilson of the Cubs compiled.

Previous winners of the most valuable player award in the National League were:

1924—Vance, Robins.
1925—Hornsby, Cards.
1926—O'Farrell, Cards.
1927—P. Waner, Pirates.
1928—Bottomley, Cards.

MORE PRIZES URGED

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—(INS.)—Players on a pennant-winning National League team who are candidates for the most valuable player award in the future will be judged partly on their work in the world series, it was indicated today following the choice of Sunny Jim Bottomley, St. Louis first baseman, as the 1928 winner. He received 76 votes, six more than his only serious rival, Fred Lindstrom, of the New York Giants.

Although Bottomley's bat proved to be full of holes in the last two months of the season and during the world series, he was chosen because of his great playing in the first four months of the campaign. His ability to drive in runs in the first half of the season practically won the pennant for the Cards.

Supporters of Lindstrom point out that the New York third sacker outbatted Bottomley by 23 points and was consistently brilliant in the field. This faction is heading a move to have the committee consider world series performances in making its selection, as is done in the American League. The suggestion will be advanced here next week at the annual meeting of the league.

Some of the members of this group event went so far as to charge that the sports writers who made the selection had an "anti-New York" complex.

John J. McGraw, leader of the Giants, says he will propose that the league award a prize of $500 to the second most valuable player and another of $250 to the third. He pointed out that Lindstrom received more votes than winning players polled in other years.

RANGERS LOSE JOHNSON

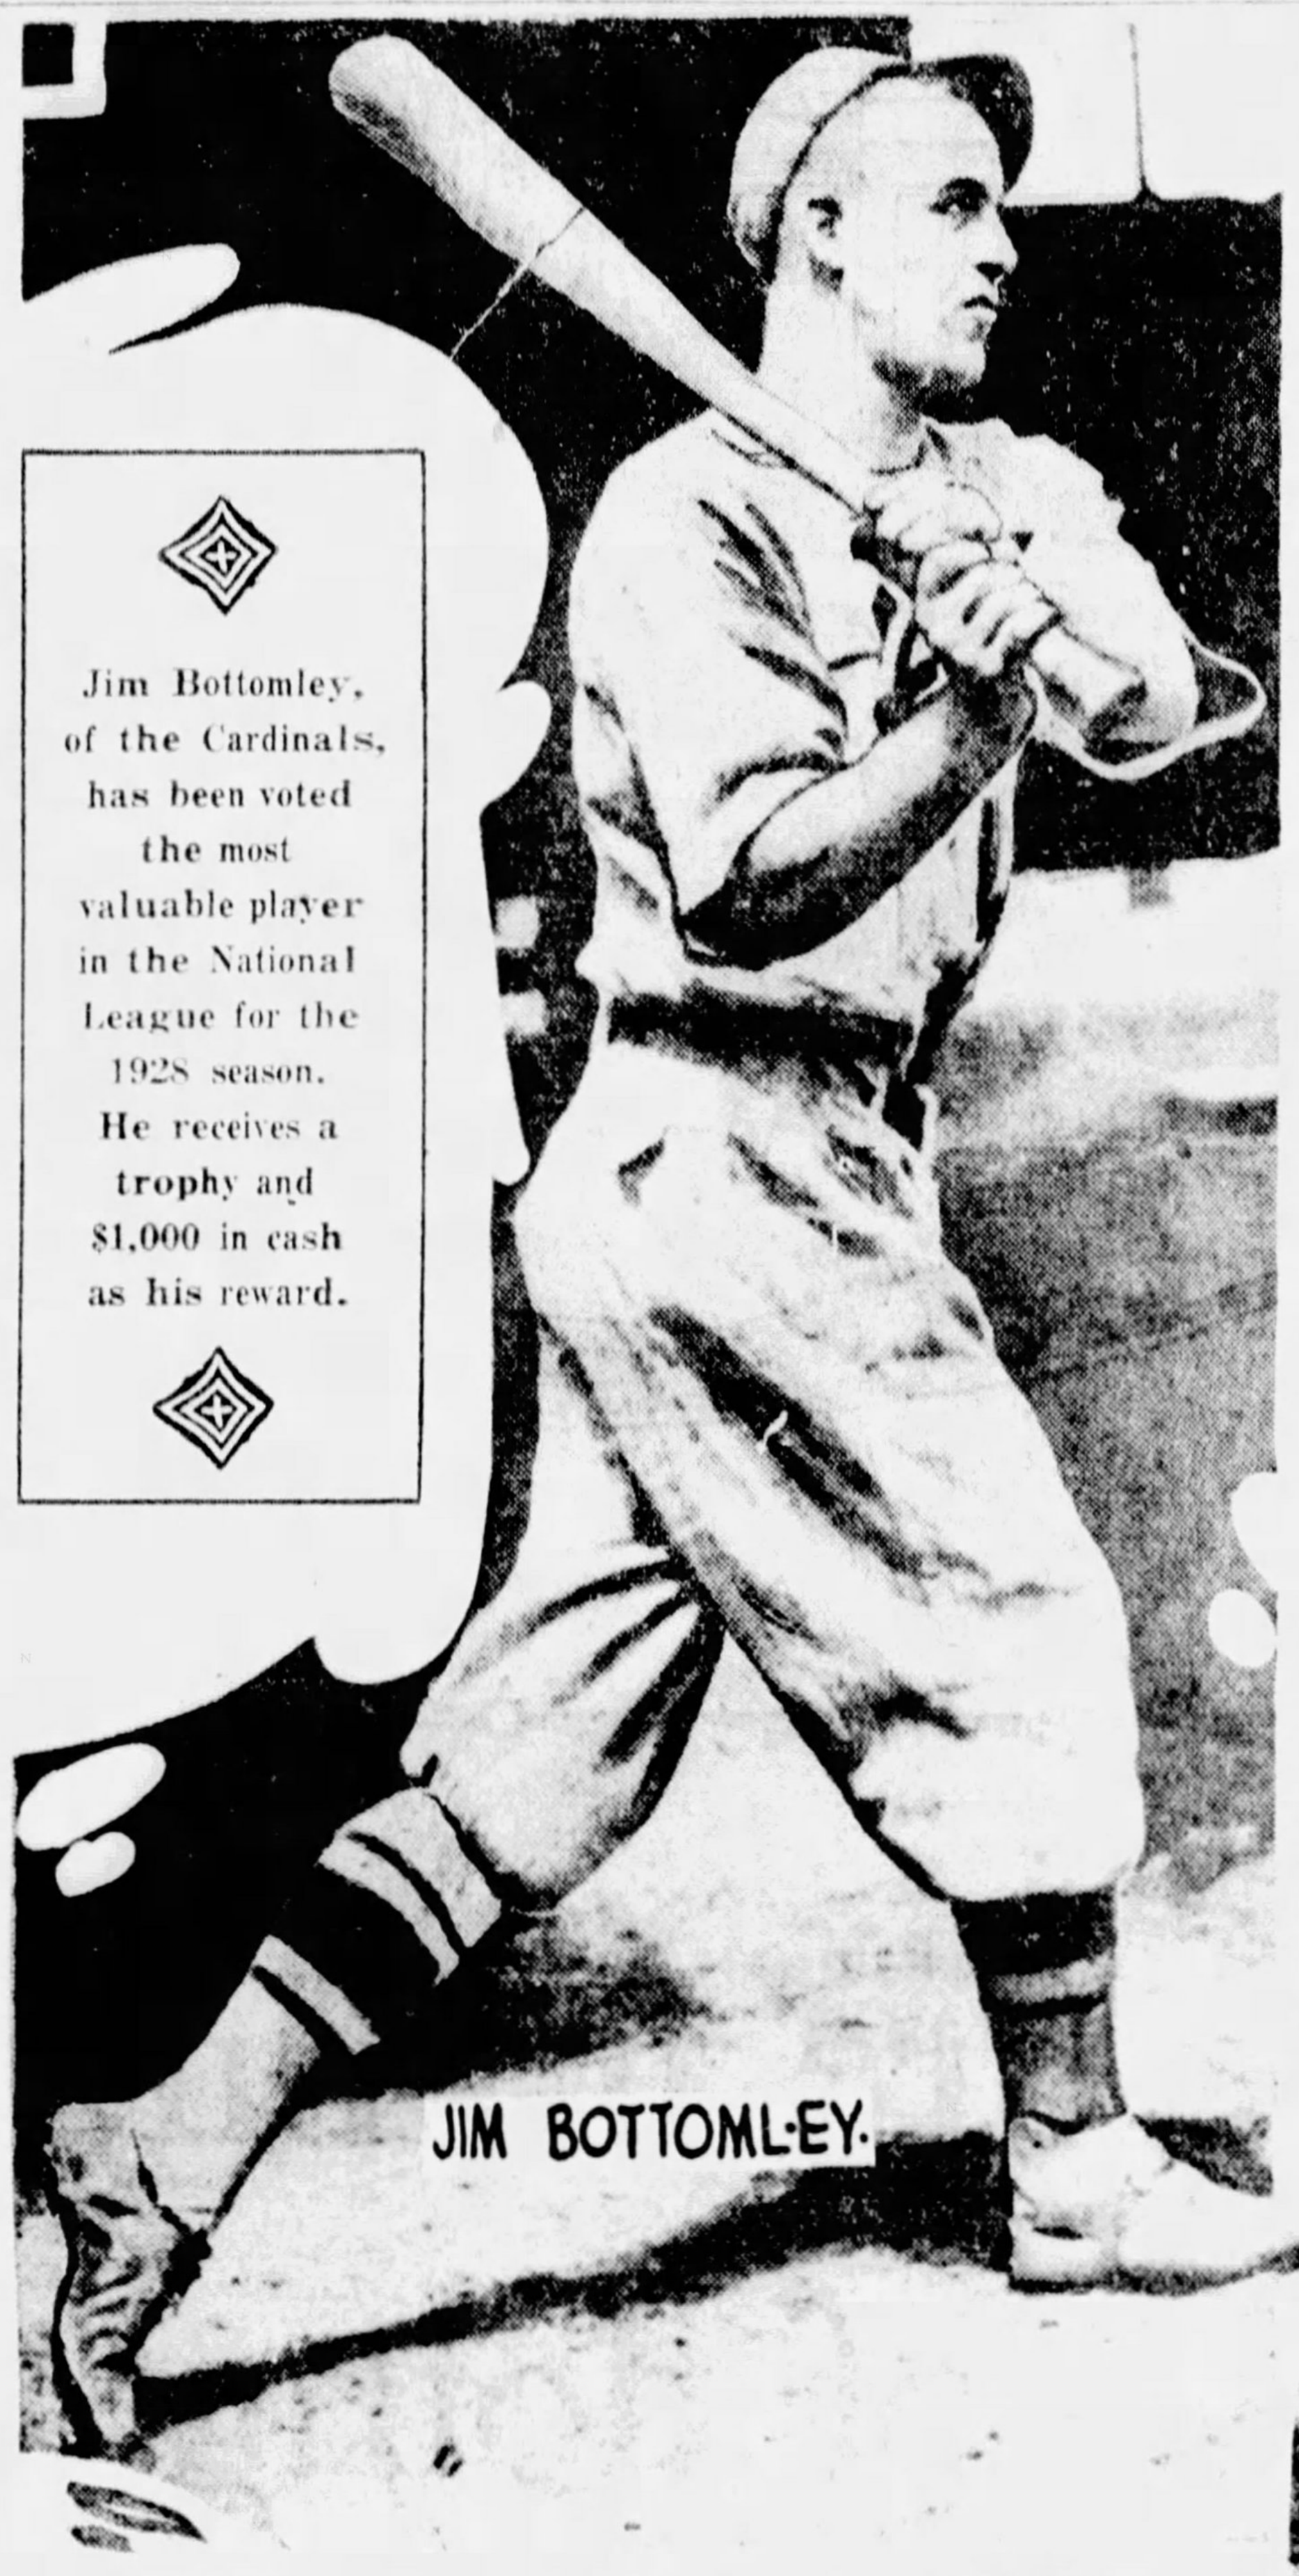
MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Ching Johnson, star defense man of the New York Rangers of the National Hockey League, will be lost to the world champions until February at least, and perhaps for the rest of the season. He suffered a fractured ankle during the Rangers' battle with the Montreal Maroons Saturday night, sliding feet foremost into the boards behind the Montreal net.



Jim Bottomley, of the Cardinals, has been voted the most valuable player in the National League for the 1928 season. He receives a trophy and $1,000 in cash as his reward.

Sunny Jim Bottomley received 76 votes out of a possible 80 from the committee of baseball writers making the most valuable player award.

Cagle Is Elected '29 Leader at West Point

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Christian Keener (Red) Cagle, of Merryville, La., the Army's outstanding football star and an all-America backfield candidate, will captain West Point's team in 1929.

The red-headed flash, whose broken field running and passing have thrilled the biggest crowds of the Eastern football season, has been elected to succeed Mortimer E. Sprague, the Texas tackle, who led the Army in a gallant but losing battle with Stanford Saturday. Cagle was the unanimous choice of the West Point "A" men.

FINEST ALIBI BELONGS TO. FOOTBALL

By HARRY KECK, Sports Editor

MORE and more as the seasons go on do we have exhibitions of football teams being "up" one Saturday and "down" the next, with the result that the campaigns are made up of a series of reversals of form that leave the followers of the sport gasping for breath at the finish. Few teams playing stiff schedules go undefeated.

And as the fan army has come to grasp the psychological aspect of the so-called upsets it has joined with the coaches and players in minimizing the victories of the underdogs, which is discouraging, to say the least, for the little fellows of the sport.

A few recent instances serve to illustrate the point. When New York University was beaten by Georgetown, 7-2, everybody said it was an accident. "Georgetown was at the peak of its game and caught N. Y. U., in a slump," they said, wagging their heads wisely. Then, when Carnegie Tech took the measure of Georgetown, the following week, it was said that Georgetown had gone over the top and was on the way down when it met up with Tech.

WHEN A FAVORITE LOSES

Notre Dame came along, with two defeats under its belt, and shellacked the Army in New York. The reaction of the public was that the better team had not won, that the loser had been the victim of an off-day. Then Carnegie rumbled along the next week and socked Notre Dame on the latter's own gridiron. "Oh," said the experts and plain fans alike, "Tech has caught another team in the doldrums. Notre Dame shot its bolt against Army and was suffering a natural let-down."

A week later Tech, the team that had beaten Georgetown, which had tumbled N. Y. U., met N. Y. U. at Forbes Field and what happened? Playing a great game Tech finished on the short end of a 27-13 score and once more the post-mortems credited the loser with having been off its feed following a great victory and minimized the victory of its vanquisher. "It was N. Y. U.'s day, and Tech couldn't hit its stride," was the verdict.

Five days later N. Y. U. took another one on the kisser, this time from the Oregon Aggies, 25-13. And

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—(AP.)—The New York Yankees evened the intercity series when they downed the New York Giants, 19 to 13, in a thrilling National Professional Football League game here yesterday.

Gibby Welch, former University of Pittsburgh flash, scored twice for the Yankees. He ran 50 yards for a touchdown after taking a pass from Kelley and took a 16-yard pass over the goal line from Smith for his other score.

WORTERS PLAYS FOR YANKS

DETROIT, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Although the New York Americans had Roy Worters, sensational goalie, they lost their second national pro hockey game in as many evenings here last night, when the Detroit Cougars, led by Carson Cooper, broke through to win, 2 to 1. The Americans dropped a game to Toronto Saturday night. Nine thousand persons saw the game. The lineup:

FAR WEST BATTLES REMAIN

By JESS CARVER

BATTERED and battle scarred, with the marring gashes of three intersectional setbacks spoiling what might otherwise have been a placid, if not beaming countenance, the East may heave a sigh with relief today as the 1928 inter-collegiate gridiron obsequies are held.

Battle lines for future engagements are still drawn up in the South and on the Pacific coast, where the annual Tournament of Roses and East-West games remain to be played, but in the East and Middle West, the season is over.

There is no out and out national champion, unless you wish to credit Southern California with the honor on the basis of the Trojan's victory over Notre Dame and Stanford.

Georgia Tech remains undefeated and untied in the South, with powerful Georgia still to be played. Boston College is supreme in the East, with a perfect record and in the Mid-west unbeaten Detroit gained further recognition with a decisive victory over Georgetown.

POP COMES THROUGH

The outstanding game of Saturday was the Stanford-Army affair at the Yankee Stadium. Pop Warner brought a dashing, spirited horde of Cardinals across the country to battle the Cadets, and battle 'em he did. Biff Hoffman made the East forget it had ever heard of the Cagle's and the Strong's by hammering and slashing at the West Point line, ably abetted by his entire supporting cast. In crushing Army, 26-0, the Cardinals established themselves as one of the nation's leading elevens, despite a setback at the hands of the U. S. C. early in the year.

Pop Warner.

Pop is still Pop. The Old Fox, prestige laden as he was, is more than burdened down with honor and glory today. Stanford's triumph was not a triumph of a team

Caddies Are the Only Persons Who Do Not Object to "Holding the Bag"

★ SUN-TELEGRAPH ★ SPORTS ★

WORTERS BAN LIFTED

MONTREAL, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Frank Calder, president of the National Professional Hockey League, last night anounced he had temporarily lifted the suspension on Roy Worters, who will be permitted to play with the N. Y. Americans until the board of governors definitely accepts or rejects the trade between Pittsburgh and the Americans.

MIZELL RECOVERS

ATLANTA, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Warner Mizell, Georgia Tech backfield ace, who was taken to a hospital Thanksgiving night suffering from influenza, was discharged last night and will be able to play in the Georgia game Saturday. He will not don a uniform until late in the week, however.

BUSH TO ATTEND MINOR LEAGUE CONFAB

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

DONIE BUSH, manager of the Pirates, is in the city today, en route to the Minor League convention which is being held this week at Toronto.

Bush came to Pittsburgh from Florida, where he has been vacationing. He and Sam Dreyfuss will be in Toronto to look after anything that might develop in the interests of the Pittsburgh club.

The Canadian city already holds many prominent baseball people as there will be meetings of one kind or another through most of the week.

Major league folks in large numbers will take part in the minor league affair. It is expected that the sessions in Toronto will be as interesting as any ever sponsored by the men who conduct the smaller circuits.

TO WATCH MINORS

Practically all of the Yankee and Giants families will look on at the doings in Toronto; it is likely that each of the 16 major league teams will have representation.

The International League and American Association will hold their annual sessions tomorrow, with Wednesday reserved for the most important business. On that day the National Association of Professional Baseball Clubs, comprised of all the minor league circuits, will convene.

The perplexing draft question doubtless will get another good going over at the hands of the minor magnates.

DAVIES, ZIVIC IN BIG BOUTS TONIGHT

Willie Davies, of Charleroi, and Pete Zivic, of Lawrenceville, appear in important battles away from home tonight.

Davies, one of the leading flyweights in the world, boxes Frenchy Belanger in the 12-round main bout of a show at Toronto, with Black Bill meeting Joey Ross and Midget Wolgast boxing Marty Gold in 10-round preliminaries, and Zivic meets Al Singer, a new sensation in New York, at the St. Nicholas arena in the big town.

Davies has been promised a bout with Frankie Genaro for the world title in Toronto if he beats Belanger, while a victory for Zivic will bring him a Madison Square Garden bout with Johnny Dundee a week later. Singer is matched with Dundee, but will be passed up if he loses to Pete.

Pete, incidentally, is a mystery. He is a main-bout attraction in many cities, including New York, but can't get a ripple from the promoters of his home section. One reason the latter assign is that he has his own ideas of his worth at the box office.

Luis Carpentero and Ernie Peters, a Filipino and an Indian flyweight, respectively, box the main bout at the Jolly Bowl in New Castle tonight, with U. S. Carpentier, of New Kensington, and Frankie Rio, of Cleveland, appearing in the semi-final. Romeo Pacelli, of New Castle, and Mickey Dugan, of Cleveland, feathers, box the other six-rounder. Elmo the Mighty meets Nick Pelis and Roy Minter engages Tom O'Leary in the four-round bouts on the card.

In other bouts carded tonight, Paulino Uzcudun, the Basque heavyweight, meets Big Bill Hartwell, Negro, of Kansas City, and Al Friedman, of Boston, battles Tom Toner, of Philadelphia, at the Arena in Philadelphia; Tod Morgan defends his world junior lightweight championship against Santiago Zorilla at San Francisco; Lew Paluso boxes Frankie LaFay at Albany, N. Y.; Jack McVey meets Arturo Sackels at Buffalo; Harry Blitman opposes Wilbur Cohen at Atlantic City, and Howard Mayberry, of Donora, mingles with Sailor Larsen, of Chicago, in an eight-rounder at East Liverpool, O., with Tommy Heilman, of Donora, boxing Young Billy Wallace, of Youngstown, in the six-round semi-final.

Johnny Roberts, of Huntington, W. Va., boxes Billy Light, of St. Paul at Chicago tomorrow night. Joe Glick meets Sammy Mandell for the lightweight championship at Detroit, New Year's Day.

Cuddy DeMarco has been matched to box Dick Hoppe, of Hollywood, Cal., at Chicago, tomorrow night.

Entries close tonight for the Greater Pittsburgh amateur championships, to be held in the McKeesport arena Wednesday and Thursday evenings.

SKIBO PASSERS START WORK

The initial workout of the Carnegie Tech varsity basketball squad is scheduled this afternoon when Coach John H. Irwin will get his first glimpse of the Skibo candidates.

Little is known concerning the prospects for a winning team this season, but Coach Irwin feels certain he will be able to mold a strong combination to represent the Tartans on the floor.

Chillysauce

Baseball's most romantic person is Babe Ruth, yet there is a certain Pirate, whose actions these days doubtless would astonish Bambino, himself. Speaking literally, Ruth would find it quite impossible to keep up with Joe Dawson, Bucco pitcher in the summer and a high grade aviator at present.

Joe was willing to call it a day as he landed at Rodgers Field after a daylight plane ride from Detroit by way of Chicago and intermediate points. The Buccaneer hurler had some business in Detroit and other cities so he took to the air and in three hours was over the city that calls for a sleeper jump when you go the regular way. After a side trip to Indianapolis and back to Detroit, Dawson and his flying pals wishing to get to Chicago and Pittsburgh from Detroit in the same day, took off the next morning. They completed the flight, a short stop being made in Chicago.

Aviator Joe is teaching his art to a good-sized class of students.

It was to be expected, apparently, that Jim Bottomley, Cardinal first baseman, would receive the most valuable player prize in the National League. Sunny Jim didn't have much of an edge on Fred Lindstrom, but the margin on votes in his favor represents $1,000 in money as well as the honor.

This "boy-scout" award is not so popular as it continues each season. The idea of giving the whole purse to one man when generally there are 10 so close in value that a division would be fairer, is not to be applauded.

For some reason the voters continue to overlook the value of Pie Traynor, Pirate captain. You cannot convince Bucco supporters that Bottomley should receive twice as many ballots as Pie. Take Traynor out of action for 50 games and omit Sunny Jim for a similar period and what would be the effect? Write your own ticket, but don't forget it is a bit easier to get satisfactory first-base understudies than it is to acquire reservists for the hot corner. Orsatti showed he was pretty keen around first, but who can fill Pie's shoes?

The fact that Burleigh Grimes was voted the third most valuable player should please Pittsburgh fans. Grimes received 53 votes, or 16 more than the number accorded Larry Benton. The spitball star surely had a remarkable season, his willingness to go to the mound any time being one of his admirable qualities.

Wouldn't it be more appropriate, however, to have a separate award for the best pitcher, aside from competitive prizes for those who play every day? The league has enough money on hand to handle the plan on a more satisfactory basis.

COUNTY LEAGUE OPENS SEASON NEXT WEEK

By JULIUS LEVIN

Everything is in readiness for the opening of the reorganized Allegheny County League a week from tonight when the Duquesne Lafayettes, twice winners of the loop title, and the Goldensons, composed mainly of former stars of the Pittsburgh Morrys, clash in the lid-lifter at Duquesne.

The Goldensons have been bolstered considerably by the signing of Whitey Littell, former Morry forward. There was some doubt about Littell's presence in the line-up of the South Siders, but the announcement that he has been signed assures followers of the loop that he will appear in the inaugural next Monday night.

This game brings together the champions of the league and what looms as their foremost challenger. Fans are looking for a nip-and-tuck fight from the start. Two newcomers in the league will clash on Tuesday night in the second game, the Miele-Franchini quintet opposing Reliance Life on the Columbus Temple floor.

The Miele-Franchini quintet, runner-up in the P. & O. League race last winter, has been strengthened by the addition of new stars and is picked to finish in the first division of the County League race. Reliance likewise will present a line-up composed of well-known local professional stars.

Another strong league will pry off the lid of its season next Friday night when Immaculate Heart opposes the M. J. Conleys in the opening battle of the Pittsburgh & Ohio Valley League. The Conleys, formerly the Schwartz Valley Club, of the County League, are known to possess a powerful quintet, but they will find Immaculate Heart a worthy rival.

The McKeesport Alumni Club, a member of the P. & O. League, will hold a workout on the Zionist floor in McKeesport tonight. Contrary to early reports Sammy Klateman and Harry Sapira, Somerman stars, will not play with the Tubers, having received amateur cards to appear with the Y. M. H. A. quintet.

Girls' basketball teams will hold a meeting in the Jenkins Arcade tonight for the purpose of organizing a league. The Goldenson Vanities and the National Union Fire Insurance girls will be among the teams enrolled, according to reports. Any team desiring admittance is invited to send a representative to the meeting.

The Silver Knights have several dates open on their schedule for Tuesday and Friday games at home and abroad. The Silver Knights plays their home games at Langley High School. Call J. C. Leech at Court 2400.

The Lou Gordons who defeated Tarentum Y. in their opening game are eager to hear from all junior teams. Call Grant 6823-R, or write William Sakolsky, 209 Dinwiddie street.

Not much competition marked the playing of Sunday's soccer schedule, the teams were recuperating from a tough Turkey Day card, and yesterday saw nothing of a real fight except Dunlevy where the old turbulent spirit was again in evidence.

One game was staged in the American League, Heidelberg staged a last-minute game with East Pittsburgh Magyars, and as usual the former national champions won by a comfortable margin, 4-to-0.

The junior cup battle at Dunlevy was won by Curry, the visitors nosing out the Dunlevy boys, 2 goals to 1. According to reports there was much worry after the game was over, so Dunlevy may be staging its home games away for a long time.

Thoms Run had an easy time with the Brigeville Scholastics, the Run winning, 7 goals to 2. Heidelberg and Glendale played to a 2-2 tie.

In the Up-River League Monongahela-Donora game found each team scoring one one goal.

Yellow Jackets' Star Gets Fractured Skull

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Wally Diehl, fullback for the Frankford Yellow Jackets football team, suffered a fractured skull in yesterday's game with the Chicago Bears.

Diehl was injured in the second period when he was tackled while carrying the ball.

FINEST ALIBI

what was the explanation? Merely that the victory over Carnegie here had sent the Violets up in the clouds and they were ripe for some fighting team to come along and knock the props out from under 'em.

BUNCOME? YOU SAID IT

I sometimes wonder if this psychological and "mental attitude" angle isn't overstressed and mostly the bunk.

You don't hear of good race horses or good fighters or good golfers or tennis or baseball players being so erratic, do you? A notable victory for them isn't necessarily expected to be followed by a defeat, is it? As a matter of fact, if a race horse should prove to be as much of an in-and-outer as the average football team, either it or its jockey or owner would be ruled off the turf for pulling punches.

The mental attitude alibi was first dug up by the coaches. Then the scribes accepted it as an easy means of covering up their bum predictions, and now it has become a universal foible, with the result that a beaten favorite always is speedily forgiven on the ground that "it had to happen," while the underdog eleven that handed out the beating gets absolutely no credit.

ILLOGICAL PROPOSITION

It is true that coaches have to "point" their teams for certain games which they are most desirous of winning, but is that any reason why the opposition should wilt and stagger in those battles and permit a walkover for the team that has been "pointed"? And, conversely, does it explain why a team that has not been "pointed" should not be expected to be able to go through the simple maneuvers of playing good football?

There may be an excuse for a physical letdown, due to injuries or a hard bruising, following a big game, but the alleged intricacies of the mental workings of football players lack the ring of sincerity.

We are supposed to believe that a team that has just taken a sound thrashing may be expected to come back with a lot of pep and vinegar and the spirit of the conqueror and crush its foe the following week, while a team that has just scored an overwhelming victory cannot possibly attune itself mentally to remembering what a football looks like the next Saturday.

Hooey! Buncome? Flapdoodle?

You took the words right out of my mouth, Dr. Watson. Hasten with that needle!

BUCS AFTER OATMAN

By CARL W. SHATTO.

Russell Oatman, left wing of the Montreal Maroons, probably will become a Pirate today.

In discussing the deal this morning, Manager Odie Cleghorn, of the Pittsburgh club, said that he had been assured by Montreal officials that the Pirates could have Oatman in the event that Dave Trottier, Olympic games star of last year recently signed by the Maroons, showed big league ability. Trottier played his first game with the Maroons in Detroit Saturday night and scored an assist on the only goal tallied by Montreal. News reports on the game credit him with playing like a veteran star, and Cleghorn expects Trottier's showing to result in Oatman's being sold to the Pirates today.

Oatman is a rugged performer, and he is no stranger to Pittsburgh fandom. He is a deadly shot, and deadly shots appear to be the crying need of the Bucs at this time.

Mickey McKay, kept out of Saturday's game with a knee injury, probably will be able to get back into action when the Rangers come here Thursday, according to Pilot Odie.

W. & J. and Thiel On Temple Card

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Temple University's football team will play a schedule of 10 games in 1929, all of them at home with the exception of the contest with Western Maryland, which will be played at the Municipal Stadium, Baltimore, on October 19.

The schedule: September 28, Thiel; October 5, St. Thomas; October 12, St. Bonaventure; October 19, Western Maryland at Baltimore; October 26, Washington and Jefferson; November 2, Bucknell; November 9, Gallaudet; November 16, Lafayette; November 23, Drake; November 30, Villa Nova.

in the minds of football fans—it was a triumph of Warner. Old Pop may now go back to California with the sweet knowledge that he was able to cross the land, play a major opponent and win by a more than decisive score—and all within seven days.

And someone made the crack this fall that Pop was just a memory!!

Notre Dame brought its most disastrous football season of recent years to a close by taking one on the button at Los Angeles. U. S. C. joined with Wisconsin, Georgia Tech and Army as a team able to throw aside the [illegible] that seem to affect most of the Rambler's foemen and turn back Rockne and his warriors.

Notre Dame's poor showing this fall simply goes on the books as added proof that the smartest coach must have the material to turn out a winner.

The Trojans, uncontested champions of the Pacific, conquerors of Stanford and tied only by California, outplayed the Irish every step of the way in their 27-14 victory. They will enter the Tournament of Roses games against Georgia Tech as favorites, and if they win that one, they'll have by far the best claim to the national title.

FIREMEN IN TIE; WEST VIEW AND OLYMPICS WIN

By TOM BIRKS.

INDEPENDENT football had a summer setting yesterday, and the three leading games found fine crowds seeing the battles. For the second time this season East Pittsburgh and McChesneytown played to a scoreless tie, the muddy field hampering both clubs. West View kept its slate intact by winning its local derby with Carrick, the Park boys copping by a 9-to-0 score. The Tube City battle between the McKeesport Olympics and Port Vue, Iverson's club won by a 7-to-0 tally.

Rainbow Gardens, is fast becoming one of the most popular independent venues in the district and 6000 fans crowded the park to see the Tube City championship, and what a battle it was.

When the first half was over nothing had been scored although both clubs made large gains. In the third period, Hyme Goldberg plunged through the Port Vue line for the only touchdown of the game and Hefler added the extra point.

The battle at East Pittsburgh was watched by around 6,000 fans, and while it was not the best game of the season, it was well worth watching. In the matter of first downs, McChesneytown held the edge, 5 to 1. Zoltac was on the side lines with a crippled leg, and Andy was missed by the Firemen. The field was muddy, and a heavy field does not suit the sort of game the Latrobe outfit stages.

West View kept in the titular race when Noggler scored the only touchdown of that game. Mose Kelsch, just to be congenial, kicked another field goal. By the way, it seems to be a lost art in the collegiate ranks—kicking field goals—but the independents can get one out of their system every once in a while.

THAT WEST VIEW HITCH

Who is the real manager of the West View independent football team? That question is going to be asked in sandlot football circles quite extensively during the week following Paul Muzzio's meeting with Manager Kennedy of the McChesneytown team in the sporting department of the Sun-Telegraph last evening to try and arrange a meeting between the only two undefeated clubs in the district, and the game upon which hinges the independent gridiron championship of Western Pennsylvania. Muzzio, answering Kennedy's direct challenge, admitted he did not have the power to sign a contract to bring the teams together.

Muzzio's answer was the direct lie to one of the most one-sided stories written since an effort was made to bring the teams together. But before the West View man admitted he could not sign a contract, the fans should know the offers made by the respective clubs.

Muzzio stated that West View wanted to play McChesneytown, and seeing that he had a home grounds, the game should be played there. He then stated that no guarantee could be given, and that McChesneytown would be given 40 per cent of the receipts. Then Kennedy offered Muzzio a $600 guarantee, with a privilege of 50 per cent of the gate receipts, for the game to be played at Latrobe High School Field next Saturday. Muzzio stated he would not play at Latrobe under any circumstances. Kennedy asked that Muzzio duplicate the Latrobe offer, and then Muzzio admitted he could not sign a contract.

Now fans know just how the situation stands in the matter of bringing the teams together. They have been grossly misled by the West View press agents, who unfairly tried to force the meeting at Muzzio's terms by belittling the record of the Latrobe club.

FINE RECORDS

Both West View and McChesneytown have wonderful football clubs. If they did not, they would have been in the defeated ranks long ago. And this business of outsiders kicking in with their little say when they know nothing of the situation is leading the followers of the game astray.

There is no question that the game should be played. If Managers Muzzio and Kennedy are not capable of arranging this game, who is? That is the question fans will be asking this week.

There has never been a team in the district that ever compiled McChesneytown's record on the road. It has played Burns, Springdale, Port Vue twice, and East Pittsburgh twice, all on foreign soil. And has yet to be defeated. In fact, only one club has been able to cross the goal line of the Latrobe team. All the leading teams in the district have been met at their terms, so why the kid stuff about not belonging to this district?

McChesneytown came down from Latrobe last evening, laid its cards on the table, offered three times the amount of money West View offered for the game, and now, if the game is not staged, the fans at least will know wherein the fault lies.

Sports Comment

By JAMES J. LONG

in which he battered McLarnin in five of the seven rounds and punched him into subjection left no room for argument as to the merits of his performance. Adding his previous impressive showings, which included quick knockouts over Sid Terris and Lope Tenorio, Miller must be considered as having a fine chance to get somewhere. He looked a whole lot more impressive in his victory over McLarnin than did either Joe Glick or Baby Joe Gans in their recent New York bout, won by Glick, on which a title match with Mandell was understood to be at stake.

WHILE giving Boston College due credit as the only Eastern football team that went through the intercollegiate season without being defeated or tied, don't overlook the record made by an eleven in the middle-West.

The University of Detroit, coached by Charles E. (Gus) Dorais, former Notre Dame star, not only placed a perfect season to its credit by defeating Georgetown on Saturday, but ran up its string of victories to the unusual total of 15 in a row. Detroit won all of its last six contests in 1927, beating Carnegie Tech, among others, and this year was victorious in all of its nine engagements. In the 15 games Detroit was scored against by only five of the opposing teams for a total of 48 points, while its own scoring power produced a total of 462.

THOUGH possible Pirate trading activities were suggested by the unexpected arrival here yesterday of Manager Donie Bush, of the Pittsburgh Baseball Club, together with his announcement of an eleventh-hour decision to attend the Minor League meeting opening in Toronto, Ont., Wednesday, the Buccaneer skipper declared that there was nothing in the wind. "Of course it will be an opportunity to make arrangements for the placing of some young players whom we may decide not to keep," said Bush, "but the presence of Treasurer Sam Dreyfuss and myself in Toronto will have to do mainly with the Major League movement to urge the restoration of the draft. I do not look for any trading, on our part at least, to develop during the meeting of the Minors." However, while Donie may not be seeking any trades before the National League meeting next week, it is not likely that he would overlook any chance that might arise in Toronto to further the plan for the trading of Glenn Wright for some other shortstop, Travis Jackson preferred, though the prospect of his being able to get Jackson is no longer promising.

Money Menaces Speculation; Business Activity Gains.

—By B. C. FORBES

AT LAST the market has demonstrated that stocks can fall as abruptly as they can rise. Friday's session, when call money went to 10 per cent, witnessed breaks of 10 and 20 points in a handclasp. Once again, however, the powerful bulls recovered most of the lost ground.

The experience should prove a warning. But it's doubtful if it will. Wall Street notoriously flies to extremes. And in this instance Wall Street has been joined by outsiders in numbers never before known.

THE sensational collapse of the Canadian Marconi on the Curb market, from a Wednesday high of 28½ to 7 before trading was ordered stopped for the day, is a spectacle which may be duplicated in other directions. The boom in speculation has been used—misused—by unscrupulous gamblers to force more than one stock to ridiculous heights, totally unwarranted by past earnings or prospects. Indeed, the state authorities are understood to be investigating at least one case of this kind, also on the curb market.

A WEEK AGO a table was given here showing how far certain stocks had fallen from the year's peak. Today it will be in order to show the tremendous extent of the rise of certain other stocks.

THE writer looks for disturbing fluctuations in money rates this month. Various outside lenders of call money are likely to make rather heavy withdrawals before the year ends. The presidents of the nation's largest banks tell me they are in no position instantly to make good such withdrawals.

The Federal Reserve banks are in a weaker position today than they have been in seven years. The reserve ratio fell more than 3 per cent last week; in New York almost 10 per cent. Brokers' loans, the Federal Reserve bank reveals, expanded $132,765,000 last week. In two months the expansion has been $765,000,000 and the total $5,289,900,000, is some $1,750,000,000 above that of a year ago.

Meanwhile Canada has taken $22,000,000 of gold and $25,000,000 has been "earmarked" for foreign accounts.

SUCH facts would chill a stock market which had not given itself over wholly to unreasoning speculation. One prominent stock exchange house (J. S. Bache & Co.), aptly observes:

"There is a game played at the beaches where a large-sized rubber ball is passed around excitedly, each player doing his utmost to get the ball out of his hands and into another's, because when the gong sounds, the one holding the ball loses the game. This is something like the game being played by probably three-quarters of the public who are speculating in the market."

On only six full-session days during November did transactions on the stock exchange fall below 5,000,000; on six days they overran 6,000,000 shares. The word "conservatism" has been dropped out of Wall Street's vocabulary—for the hectic present. It will return.

PROSPERITY is the prevailing keynote in industry and business. November brought further improvement. Should the stock market not prove a disturbing factor, this improvement should continue during December. The 1928 results of many companies, especially the largest ones, will make a very satisfactory showing.

This table summarizes the degree of activity in the main industrial groups; the average productive activity during 1923-1925 is here used as par, or 100.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND VIEWS

Stocks React Further.

The reaction on the stock exchange made further downward progress today, but, as in Saturday's trading, there was no unusual disturbance and the market appeared to be well in hand at all time. Signs indicated that some of the most important operators were standing aside and permitting some of their favorite issues to seek such levels as the situation warranted. However, it is quite likely that should any disorder make its appearance, the powerful traders who have been rushing the market up almost at will for about two years will step into the breach with all the credit and support necessary to stem anything that might be shaping up as a bad slump. A market debacle at this time would serve to put the brakes on the national industrial machine now going into full swing after a period of depression experienced the latter part of last year and the early months of the current calendar, and any interference with the business progress now being made is the last thing the big operators want. In this they are probably in agreement with the biggest bankers, although the latter are known to have frowned on some of the speculative sprees engendered by the "Big Ten's" campaigns, especially that phase now designated as the Hoover market.

Canadian Marconi.

Canadian Marconi, on the New York Curb, opened lower again today, with the initial sale recorded as a block of 42,600 shares at 8½, off 2 points from Saturday's last price. The decline resulted from further selling induced by the official estimate that the company's earnings in 1928 probably will not exceed 2 cents a share on the stock. Stock market followers will have their joke under any and all circumstances, and in the wreckage of the Marconi bubble, the facetious ones are now saying that the great rise was due to the fact that "1928 earnings were estimated at double those of 1927." The company's report for 1927 showed earnings of 1 cent a share on the stock.

General Motors-Yellow Truck.

The consensus in the Street is that General Motors Corporation sold its holdings in Yellow Truck to cash in an attractive profit. It is estimated that more than $3,000,000 has been realized on this sale since the stock was purchased at $20 a share. At present prices, Yellow Truck and Coach is selling in the market for around $115,000,000. Net tangible assets of the company are around $35,000,000 or one third of its market value. The 154,500 shares sold in the open market by General Motors are equal to 37 per cent of the total of 404,500 shares of B stock held, and General Motors still retains 250,000 shares of this issue as well as 800,000 shares of common stock. Aggregate holding are still equal to 50 per cent of the total voting stock of Yellow Truck. The latter company carried a profit and loss deficit on September 30 of $575,000. In 1927 the operations showed a loss of $6,858,691 before preferred dividends. For the first nine months of this year the loss was $700,253. It is expected that the full year will show a deficit considerably smaller than the 1927 loss, but this is due to the fact that in 1927 heavy charges were incurred on account of a complete reconstruction of the company's product and plant facilities.

Hundred-Point Advances.

The uprush in stocks during 1928 has been the most sensational in the history of the market. Many are more than 100 points above the year's bottoms, a few are up 200 points and Montgomery Ward had a swing of more than 300. Following is a list of stocks in which the advances from the 1928 lows to the highs were 100 points or more: Adams Express, American Express, American Linseed, American Smelting and Refining, Brooklyn Edison, Case Threshing Machine, Commercial Solvents, Coty, Curtiss, Du Pont, Federal Mining and Smelting, Hocking Valley, International Harvester, International Nickel, Montgomery Ward, Motor Products, National Bellas Hess, National Tea, New York and Harlem, Otis Elevator, Radio, Rossia Insurance, Sears, Roebuck, Utah Copper, Victor preferred and Wright.

Stock Exchange Credit.

Brokers' loans have increased 50.7 per cent and the average renewal rate for call money has risen 90.1 per cent during the past year, according to a compilation appearing in the Granger Financial Review, published by Sulzbacher, Granger & Co. The volume of trading on the New York Stock Exchange during November increased 10.3 per cent as compared with the same month last year. The compilation was made to include the last brokers' loan report issue on November 30, as compared with the corresponding report of one year ago. "Of the $5,289,900,000 brokers' loans now outstanding, New York banks are lending 23.3 per cent on their own account and 43.3 per cent for the account of individuals and corporations. One year ago these percentage figures were 36.5 per cent and 27.3 per cent, respectively," according to the review. "In the same 12 months the participation of out-of-town banks in the New York market decreased slightly in proportion to the total, or from 36.2 per cent to 33.4 per cent." The review points out that "it is evident that large corporations, wealthy individuals and foreign interests are more and more being attracted by the prevailing high rates of interest available through the call money market on brokers' loans. "Especially is this so since these loans are made up of the soundest possible collateral, the stocks and bonds of leading American corporations."

Insolvency Trend Reversed.

Reversing the trend witnessed in many other years, the number of commercial failures in the United States declined during November. Instead of the increase that usually develops at this season, defaults last month fell off a little more than 9 per cent, following a sharp upturn in October. As reported to R. G. Dun & Co., the November insolvencies totaled 1,838, compared with 2,023 in October, and were slightly below November, 1927. The decrease from the 1,864 failures of a year ago approximated 1.4 per cent, while at that time there was a rise of 4.3 per cent over the October figures. In nearly all years of the last decade, in fact, more defaults occurred in November than in October, and an analysis of the returns for an even longer period discloses a similar tendency. For 11 months of the present calendar year, mercantile insolvencies numbering 21,899 have been 4.4 per cent above the 20,984 failures for the corresponding months of 1927, but the increase seems the more moderate when the steadily enlarging total of firms and individuals in business is considered.

The Chesapeake Hearing.

Financial phases of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad's project for acquisition of control of the Pere Marquette system were detailed today to the Interstate Commerce Commission at the reopening of its hearing. The Chesapeake and Ohio still holds 140,000 shares of Erie Railroad stock. This holding was disclosed by account sheets of the Virginia Transportation, a Chesapeake and Ohio subsidiary. By the pending proposal, the Chesapeake and Ohio seeks authority to pay $133.33 per share for Pere Marquette common stock held by the Nickel Plate Railroad, and also asks permission to issue its own stock at $100 a share to its present stockholders to obtain funds for the purchase. Previous authority of commission gave the Chesapeake and Ohio power to pay $110 per share for Pere Marquette stock, but required it to ask $150 per share from its stockholders for new stock.

R. S. Marshall, vice president of the Chesapeake and Ohio and the road's chief fiscal officer, appraised Pere Marquette common stock as having a value of $154 on earnings basis, $159.80 on a book investment basis and $135.80 on the basis of the I. C. C. final valuation as of December 31, 1926, including a corporate surplus to October 31, 1928, of $11.80 a share.

Exchange Seats at $600,000.

Arrangements are in progress for transferring membership in the New York Stock Exchange for $600,000. This compares with $585,000 the last sale and high record.

Larger Membership Plan.

Among plans for increasing the New York Stock Exchange membership, the committee working on the problem is considering one which would grant to present members the right to nominate additional members. This was disclosed today in a letter sent by Warren B. Nash, chairman of the committee, to members. Under the plan, the present membership of 1,100 would be increased by 285, 550 or 1,100, and each member would be given the right to nominate a candidate for a quarter, half or full new membership, according to the increase decided upon. This plan is practically equivalent to granting a "seat dividend" to members. A number of members who have been opposed to increasing the number of seats because they have feared it would reduce the value of the present seats, are understood to favor the "dividend" plan. The agitation for increasing the number of members which has been held at the present number since 1879, has gathered strength as the present capacity of the exchange has been taxed to the limit during the violent trading of recent weeks.

Brass Merger Under Way.

It was reported from Rome, N. Y., today that directors of the Rome Brass and Copper Company have approved a plan to merge with six other companies into the General Brass Corporation, which is expected to control about 20 per cent of the country's brass and copper business. The companies included are the Taunton-New Bedford Copper Company, of Taunton and New Bedford, Mass.; the Baltimore Sheet Mill of the General Cable Company; the Rome Manufacturing Company; the Michigan Brass and Copper Company, of Detroit; the Dallas Brass and Copper Company, of Chicago, and the Higgins Brass and Manufacturing Company, of Detroit. It is rumored that some of the big copper producing and smelting companies are interested in the deal, but nothing definite has been stated on this subject. Alignment of a group of the copper companies with the proposed General Brass Corporation would put them in a better position to compete with Anaconda Copper, which is at present the most completely rounded out organization in the industry by reason of its control of the American Brass Company, leading factor in the field.

It may be months before this committee is ready to report of any action taken should they make a report favoring a merger, as it is a matter which is not at all urgent."

LARGE VOLUME OF CHRISTMAS BUSINESS

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

THE retail merchants are starting the Christmas season with an exceptionally large volume of sales. James E. Fulton, president of the Monongahela National Bank, said that one store in the middle of November established a daily quota of sales for each day of the holiday season. Up to the latter part of the month the quota was exceeded every day with only one exception.

Mr. Fulton stated that many of the smaller business organizations have not prospered to the same extent in 1928 as the larger corporations. He believes, however, that there is an abundance of opportunity for the individually-owned business — that great corporations will not, by any means, supplant the independents.

Management is the deciding factor in any business, large or small. Most of the difficulties of small business can be traced to lack of the proper ability rather than to the mere limitations of their size.

THE Monongahela National Bank shares in the accounts of several of the largest organizations in the city, but it is unique in that it handles a predominance of small accounts. According to Mr. Fulton, it handles a greater volume of individual checks than most of the other institutions in the city.

The new building, which was opened recently, has been designed to meet the requirements of the particular type of business which the bank handles. Every effort has been made to eliminate the necessity for standing in line and waiting before a teller's counter. Arrangements have been made so that the clerks stationed behind the tellers can assist in counting and recording deposits during busy times.

The elimination of the old cages has added to the appearance of the bank. All of the tellers' equipment for handling their work is kept below the level of the counter and out of sight of the public.

In addition, it is impossible for a person standing next to depositors to see the amount recorded by the teller or to see the money counted. Banking can be done at the Monongahela with a degree of privacy not attainable where older equipment is used.

THE construction of a California plant is again being considered by the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company. Officials are selecting a site near San Francisco. Several months ago a location was actually chosen but several difficulties arose and the project was temporarily dropped.

The type of equipment to be used and the size of plant to be built have not been definitely decided. It is possible that a unit for the production of Duplate, the company's new laminated safety glass, may also be started at the new location.

THE recent decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission, relieving railroads of the necessity of installing additional automatic train control equipment, will make the future development of these devices slow. The commission, in its report, expressed the opinion that better results would be obtained through the concentration of expenditures on other improvements.

Few installations of automatic train control have been made voluntarily by the railroads. The order of the commission made a few years ago for installation of the systems on large areas of line gave the General Railway Signal Company and the Union Switch and Signal Company large orders but during the past year there has been practically no additional business of this type although sales of other signal devices have continued in a fairly normal volume.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—The cotton market opened steady at a decline of 7 to 11 points with the active months showing net losses of about 8 to 13 points during the first few minutes under liquidation, together with some southern selling which was promoted by relatively easy Liverpool cables. The initial offerings were quite readily absorbed at the decline to 20.18c for January and the market recovered to about Saturday's closing quotations, after which trading was quiet and fluctuations rather irregular. At the end of the first half hour prices were about 2 to 10 points net lower, with December relatively easy under liquidation. Private cables said there had been local, London and continental liquidation in Liverpool, but that cloth demand was well sustained with further business pending.

Fluctuations were irregular later in the morning. Bulges met increased realizing or liquidation probably prompted by uncertainty as to the showing of the approaching government crop and ginning reports, but the declines brought in some trade buying and covering. Prices sold back about to or a shade below the earlier low levels during the middle of the morning. Trading was quiet with the market showing rallies of a few points from the lowest.

January which had sold off to 20.17 was selling around 20.25c with the active months generally showing net losses of 4 to 10 points.

BLAW KNOX MOVES UP; GENERAL LIST NARROW

Lowering tendencies of prices in the New York market caused some hesitation on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today, but prices held fairly steady.

In view of the unfavorable attitude of the general trading element, arising out of the high call money rates, the opening of Congress and the widespread opinion that the pace and volume of the market have been too high recently, the performance of the list today could not be considered poor.

Early demand for Blaw Knox in the local market forced a slight rise in that issue, while most of the other stocks held fairly close to Saturday's final prices with an inclination to sag off. However, there was no heavy selling and it was assumed that holders were retaining their stocks awaiting a more definite sign from the big market. The fuel issues were steady. Salt Creek Consolidated Oil dropped back a small fraction, but not much of the stock came out. Heaviness in this issue was ascribed to fear of unfavorable outcome regarding some of the government leases in the Salt Creek field, but traders who have been bullish on the issue recently believe that the company will come through any investigation with a clean bill of health. Dividend yield on Salt Creek Consolidated at current figures is better than 13 per cent and the company has about 4,000 barrels of shut-in production in one of the best regulated and longest lived fields in the mid-continent area.

STOCK PRICES SKID, TRADING CONTRACTS

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Heavy liquidation for both accounts brought about a sharp reaction in prices in today's stock market. Net losses of 1 to 4 points were distributed over a broad list of rails and industrials, with a score or more of the high-priced issues down 5 to nearly 15 points. Trading shows a further contraction in volume.

Call money renewed at 8 per cent and advanced to 9 as banks called $35,000,000 in loans. Because of the necessity of strengthening their reserve positions, banks had a relatively small supply of funds available, making 10 per cent call money again a likely prospect.

There was nothing in weekend news developments to influence the selling movement. However, the sharp break in Canadian Marconi on the New York Curb, stiff money rates and the indications of another huge increase in stock exchange member loans led to a widespread liquidation of speculative accounts. Many traders also were scared at the rapid manner in which prices of some of the recent favorites melted away under pressure.

Greene Cananea broke 13 points on the first sale. Radio ran off 10¼ points before midday, but quickly recovered its loss. Canadian Pacific dropped 9¼ points and Keith-Albee common and preferred, Woolworth, General Electric, Union Carbide, Victor Talking Machine, Montgomery Ward, Cerro de Pasco Copper, Yellow Truck and Packard Motors sold down 4 to nearly 8 points.

Only a few issues moved against the general downward trend. Warner Brothers Pictures A soared nearly 10 points to 138 and Standard Milling moved up 4 to 128, both new high records.

While few commission houses recommended short sales at this stage of the market, most of them continued to urge a cautionary policy on the long side because of the market's seemingly topheavy speculative position. Recent tightening of margin requirements also has frightened some traders out of the market, although accounts generally are reported by exchange members to be in a strong position.

SUGAR MARKET.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—The raw sugar market was quiet and unchanged early today at 3.96c for spots duty paid. No sales were reported.

Raw sugar futures opened one point higher for near positions on covering, and trade buying but 1 to 3 points lower on distant deliveries under liquidation and selling by houses with European connections. Subsequently the whole list eased off under increased hedge selling, probably promoted by failure of demand to broaden in the spot market. Prices at midday were 2 to 3 points net lower.

The market for refined sugar was unchanged at 5.25c for fine granulated. A fair withdrawal demand was reported, but new business was light.

"GOOD THINGS" ARE SCHEDULED FOR RADIO TONIGHT

FANS FIND KFI EASY TO TUNE BY NEW PLAN

By DARRELL V. MARTIN,
Radio Editor.

Rosa Ponselle, Franklyn Baur, Vaughn de Leath, Miller and Farrell—these are some of the artists who will be heard on the air tonight. Occasionally the air is crowded with "good things" and this evening happens to be one of those occasions.

Harvey S. Firestone will open a new series of programs over WCAE at 8 o'clock. The period, sponsored by the Firestone Rubber Company, will have several featured artists along with the Choral Singers and an orchestra of 35 pieces.

Complete details of these programs appear in the Sun-Telegraph radio schedule.

One good thing that has come out of the reallocation is the easy tuning of KFI, Los Angeles, a number of listeners have declared. For the first time in their experience many fans have tuned in this "DX Phenom," sometimes called "Phantom," with ease during the early hours of the evening. This is unusual. There is a time difference of three hours between Pittsburgh and Los Angeles, so this means that when KFI is picked up here before 9 o'clock the station is broadcasting in daylight. Radio signals do not travel far in the daylight.

A few listeners have made an appeal to have WCAE moved to some other band than 461 meters as they fear this station on its old wavelength will interfere with the reception of KFI. The Pacific Coast station is broadcasting on 467.5 meters.

NO ONE NEED SUFFER ANYMORE

Piles Relieved Within 24 Hours, Users Say, and Permanent, Too

OUT TOWN REPORTS PROVE CLAIMS TRUE

"One of my customers had complained so long and tried so many things for piles I never dreamed he would ever be cured," declared a druggist recently. "It looked like a hopeless case to me which only a surgeon could help, but he came in and bought a bottle of Colac Pile Pills, and on buying the second and third reported he believed results were coming at last. He was so afraid of a return of the pile trouble he kept taking them for weeks after he claimed all signs had disappeared — then rather timidly he quit, and proudly he told me the other day, he was free at last and I hope so," continued this druggist who, like the long suffering public, could not conceive of any tablet swallowed with a glass of water bringing relief to blind, itching, bleeding, chronic piles or hemorrhoids. To prove results are lasting, read the following from a man among the very first to test Colac.

"For several years I suffered almost constantly with piles, at times confined to my home," writes C. R. Vander Carr. "I tried practically every remedy on the market with no lasting results until I tried Colac Pile Pills. Within 24 hours of the time I started taking Colac I felt better and in a few days every sign of my trouble had disappeared. This was about three years ago and I have never been troubled since. I have recommended Colac to dozens of people and the results have always been the same," continued Mr. Vander Carr, Grand Mere, P. Q., Canada.

Down past the stomach and into the bowels go these pills to dissolve there and form a healing, soothing, corrective medicine reaching the most remote places—stopping pain quickly—allaying irritation and helping nature eliminate completely the cause, thereby bringing lasting relief.

Not a laxative, purely vegetable, so harmless one may take double doses without harm. Colac Pile Pills, without the aid of operation, nasty salves or suppositories, may be relied upon to bring desired results, in a remarkably short time, depending on the case, of course.

If your own druggist hasn't Colac Pile Pills send 75c to Colac Chemical Co., Brentwood, Md., for bottle with directions return mail prepaid.

Attempt to Put Over World Court Proposition Not Worthy of President Coolidge or Republican Party

IT is very unfortunate that President Coolidge should attempt to revive the proposition of putting the United States into the World Court.

No such proposal was included in the Republican national platform. If it had been, the Republican party would not have received the vote that it did receive.

To attempt to put over the World Court after election, without having made it an issue of the election, is not very far from political sharp practice. It is not worthy of the party or the President. Whenever the League of Nations or the World Court has been an issue it has been overwhelmingly defeated by the people at the polls.

The World Court was a specific issue in the congressional primary elections of 1926. Early that year the Senate voted to have this country join the League of Nations' World Court, providing the members of the League of Nations would let us come in with five reservations. Reservation No. 5 provided that the World Court should not "without the consent of the United States, entertain any request for an advisory opinion touching any dispute or question in which the United States has any claim or interest."

That simply meant that the League's Court, with 10 foreign judges and one United States judge, should be prohibited from broadcasting its unfavorable opinion of American policies like immigration, tariff or the Monroe Doctrine.

The Senate had no mandate to authorize putting us into the back door of the League of Nations, even with this reservation. In the 1926 primary elections, the people got a chance to say what they thought of the World Court proposal.

The following League Court Senators were defeated in the primaries: Lenroot, McKinley, Pepper, Cummings and Stanfield. In all cases the candidates who defeated them in the primaries were elected in November.

The following anti-Court Republican Senators were renominated in the primaries: Moses, Watson, Robinson, Brookhart, Nye, Williams and Harreld. Every one of them was elected in November except Harreld and Williams. Williams' successor was likewise an anti-courter.

Moreover, during the 1926 campaign, three League Court Senators recanted and said they wished they had not voted as they did: Trammell, of Florida, Gooding, of Idaho, and Cameron, of Arizona.

The World Court was apparently DEAD, and everyone was glad of it.

Perhaps the President does not realize that a large part of the opposition to the Democratic party not only in this campaign but in two previous presidential campaigns, was due to the conviction among the people that the Democratic party was committed to a policy of foreign entanglements.

If the Republican party is going to commit itself to a policy of foreign entanglements, it will transfer to itself the odium of such a policy, and in addition the resentment of the public at the party's arrogance or at least its lack of honest and open dealing.

The one mistake that the Republican party can make is to feel so confident of its success as to proceed contrary to public sentiment in such vital matters as foreign entanglements.

When the members of the League of Nations refused to accept Reservation No. 5, they proved plainly enough that their INTENT is to use the World Court against us.

We are well out of a bad mess. No service is done the country by trying to put us back into it.

Philippines—Porto Rico Need Typhoon Relief

Let us hope that the government at Washington will go promptly and generously to the relief of the Philippines and Porto Rico.

From Manila Gov. Gen. Stimson cables that thousands of Filipinos have been left homeless in the wake of one of the most devastating typhoons in the history of the Philippines. The force of the storm, he says, was as great as that which struck Porto Rico last September.

From San Juan Senator Bingham, of Connecticut, chairman of the Senate Committee on Territories, sends a similar call for help. His personal survey of conditions there convinces him that assistance from the home government will be required to help the Porto Ricans rehabilitate their island home.

Surely our dependent peoples under the flag have a right to look to Washington for something more than charity in such an emergency. Over and above what the Red Cross has done and can do for temporary relief there rests upon the government itself the obligation to stretch out a strong and helping hand.

It has been suggested that if the Philippines and Porto Rico were British possessions their needs in this emergency would have been promptly supplied by the colonial office at London. Funds for just such a purpose are at its disposal. Congress might well provide the President with a fund from which to relieve our dependent peoples when disaster overtakes them.

But time is of the essence where help to homeless thousands is involved. What is now needed is a special appropriation by Congress to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War for the financing of a relief program in our overseas possessions.

By going promptly and ungrudgingly to the assistance of these dependent peoples we shall give new proof to them and to the world that we know how to administer the trust which American sovereignty over the Philippines and Porto Rico imposes.

Economy, Not Shifting, Should Fix Bridge Status

Council is making overtures to have the county take over the maintenance of three city-owned river bridges, Manchester, Smithfield street and Twenty-second street, all that are not now owned by the county.

If the Commissioners agree, cost of keeping them up would be removed from the city, but not from the taxpayers. So far as the Pittsburgh citizen is concerned, it matters nothing whether the city or county maintains the bridges. It merely means the payment of tax to keep them up will be made to the county instead of the city.

Council has a budget-making job on hand and it needs to cut estimates considerably if the millage rate is to be kept down. Making the county a present of the bridges likely would take off quite a bit of the excess Council would like to pare. But would it help the Pittsburgh taxpayer?

Getting rid of a charge is not the only thing to be considered. Especially when it means just the shifting of the burden from one shoulder to another. If there be any economy in having the county maintain all the bridges the taxpayer, of course, will favor that. Economy of operation, however, should be the motive of the change, rather than the adoption of an expedient whereby Council appears to make a budget cut that isn't a reduction at all.

George Fox Wouldn't

Hoover DID.

At a Quaker meeting, Paul Williams, important in the Society of Friends, criticized Mr. Hoover, also a Quaker, saying "Would George Fox accept the presidency of the United States with its attendant title of Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy?"

Probably not. Fox certainly couldn't have got it. The Quakers are an admirable body, and George Fox, with his great courage, was a fine man. But Quakers have died out, and that is the best answer to pacifist criticism of Herbert Hoover. He believes in fighting for what belongs to you, and has gone ahead. What counts is SUCCESS.

Tales That Are Told

The Explanation

"IS IT true that you have broken off your engagement?" queried the inquisitive visitor.

The young man addressed shook his head mournfully.

"No," he said, "I didn't break it off."

"Oh, she broke it off, then?"

The young man again shook his head.

"But it is broken off, isn't it?"

"Oh, yes," explained the moody one with delicacy. "She told me what her milliner's bill was and I told her how much a week I got. Then our engagement just sagged in the middle and gently dissolved."

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS

SOME folks entertain their guests just like the guests was used to going to a circus every night and had to keep up the pace. They hire acrobats or fortune-tellers or something to keep the strangers entertained.

But the people I'm talking about were kinda easy-going and didn't put on much of a show for their company. The lady of the house did play a little piece on the piano, though, and then she went over by the talking machine and was going to put something on. She says to the guest, who was a man that just come in from Kansas, "How about a little sonata, or maybe a symphony before we go in to dinner?"

"Well," he says, "I'd like to awfully, but I promised my wife I wouldn't take a thing on this here trip."

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

I'VE often wondered why Emily is so popular.

She isn't nearly as pretty as Gladys—

Nor as bright as Ethel—

Nor as charming as Flora—

Nor as good as Grace.

She's untidy, careless, unpunctual and noisy—in fact, she has a long list of reprehensible qualities—

YET, SHE'S A WOW!

When Emily enters a room, that room is hers with all the humans therein—

Away goes boredom and gloom.

Your spirits lift—you relax—you begin to take a hopeful view of affairs.

After all, maybe things aren't so bad.

Silly of you to have taken everything so seriously.

Others have been up against it before and gotten by. Maybe you can, too—

A glow creeps over you—you grin—

And before you know it, you're chuckling with Emily.

That's the way Emily affects people and for a long time it was a mystery to me.

Why couldn't other girls who tried ten times as hard to please, be as popular as this big, careless, rowdy girl?

One day it dawned on me.

EMILY WAS A WHATHA 'ELL SORT OF A GIRL.

Yes, I know that's a bit profane, but no other expression can possibly describe Emily's attitude.

While others are being cautious and careful she snaps her fingers at life.

ALSO, WHAT IS MUCH MORE IMPORTANT, SHE SNAPS HER FINGERS AT HERSELF.

She takes nothing very seriously—neither life nor herself nor this strangely muddled world.

She is a natural philosopher, shrugging her shoulders at Fate—meeting Lady Luck with her tongue in her cheek—ready to thumb her nose at Destiny.

Don't gather from that that Destiny has not dealt Emily some cruel blows. She has known much more than the average amount of suffering but she hasn't allowed it to cramp her style.

"WHATHA 'ELL!" laughs Emily as she picks herself up, dusts herself off and starts on her away again.

Yes, she takes life lightly, does Emily.

AND SHE MAKES OTHERS TAKE LIFE LIGHTLY TOO.

Life's a grim affair. It rests on our neck like a heavy, galloping yoke. The yoke falls on us early and few of us learn how to shake it off. People like Emily show us how to shake it off—show us that it's an unreal burden we're carrying.

Life is what you make it. Emily makes it a gay and gallant adventure. That's why she achieves popularity where better, brighter ladies fail.

Bible Passages

"Hear Me, Oh God"

HEAR me when I call, O God of my righteousness: thou hast enlarged me when I was in distress; have mercy upon me, and hear my prayer.

O ye sons of men, how long will ye turn my glory into shame? how long will ye love vanity, and seek after leasing? Selah.

But know that the Lord hath set apart him that is godly for himself: the Lord will hear when I call unto him.

Stand in awe, and sin not; commune with your own heart upon your bed, and be still. Selah.

Offer the sacrifices of righteousness, and put your trust in the Lord.

There be many that say, Who will show us any good? Lord, lift thou up the light of thy countenance upon us.

Thou hast put gladness in my heart, more than in the time, that their corn and their wine increased.

I will both lay me down in peace, and sleep; for thou, Lord, only makest me dwell in safety.

New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Early out to the Belmont to call on James and Maybelle Woods from Los Angeles and then to the public library, where there is more gentle courtesy than I find elsewhere in New York. Breakfasted on country sousage and fried apples at a station counter.

So to talk to Jim Coffroth, the sportsman, and recalled the lonely, anxious night we spent in Mexico City many years ago with a revolution brewing, martial law declared and all trains stopped. Then met Frank Case, who introduced me to Edna Hibbard, the playactress, and to see my mother-in-law.

In the evening with my wife to drive to Coogan's Bluff and struck how desolate are the Polo Grounds in winter, then went to the new Plaza grill where came William A. Prime and his lady, Grace Larue and Hale Hamilton, and many others to a dinner party. Late to bed.

I never realized how many men were interested in holding off their hands to study their finger nails until I sat through an after-dinner speech lasting exactly one hour at the Waldorf the other evening. A noted statesman at a nearby table duplicated the vacuous expression of my dog when he is hunched up scratching a flea.

* * *

There is no more so utterly insufferable as the long-winded after-dinner speaker and I've cupped an ear for plenty—including the bright-eyed moron who details every flicker of a motion picture play. The man who carried off speaking honors of the evening stood up, told a story that required two minutes, and sat down.

* * *

At sun-down on the roof-tops of New York hotels there gather in seasonable weather groups of old women the city rarely sees. They constitute the venerable army of scrubwomen who keep mosaic floors shining and mirrors aglitter in hotel lobbies, toiling in early morning hours and sleeping all day. They live in hotel pent-houses—dull eyed, rachitic, toothless and sallow crones who often do not leave the hotels from one year's end to another.

Across the block-long stone front of the main postoffice on Eighth avenue is chiseled, "Neither snow nor rain nor heat nor gloom of night stays these couriers from the swift completion of their appointed rounds." It seems a little too lengthy to memorize for I never pass there without seeing someone jotting it down on the back of an envelope.

Uptown New York now has an exclusive toy store for little children of the rich. The cheapest gimcrack is around $25. And there is an electric railroad requiring a large room in which to operate it and costing $1,100 which has practically disrupted the regularity of of the output of a certain—can you guess? — New York syndicate writer. He has spent more than half his time there for the past 10 days, the big Fauntleroy.

UNUSED TOOL KITS

By Herbert Kaufman

ROCKEFELLER millions are busy grinding a telescope lens four times the size of any now in use.

It will quadruple existing knowledge of the heavens and reveal billions of new stars, so far away that mathematics gets a headache computing the distances.

Astronomy suspects the existence of planets which could wear the earth as a monocle. Imagination hasn't had sufficient practice to picture their immensity.

The realization that our world is five billion light years distant from some neighbors isn't easily gulped by amateur understanding.

Thinking about it rather takes the starch out of human conceit, which generally prefers to dwell upon the ant hills we call skyscrapers and engineering feats that an inhabitant of Betelgeuse could only perceive with a microscope.

But telescopes and stellar-scopes hold slight interest for the average man, who isn't looking beyond his nose.

Broadly speaking, there are always two sorts of people—little groups of thinkers to whom we're incessantly obligated for all the ideas that have redeemed us from savagery, and the rest of the Adamsons, to whom progress doesn't owe a tinker's dam.

That's why "Who's Who in America" (and everywhere else) has never found 50,000 contemporary names that deserved passing record.

The doctrine of equality is a declaration of opportunity—nothing more.

Since every able-bodied man is born with the same working and thinking outfit, he is free to establish his own level.

Ninety-nine plus per cent of us, according to Edison, will pay any price in discomfort and deprivation rather than suffer the birth-pains of originality.

The difference between a wage earner and a wage payer is a matter of lazy or active brains.

The majority of folk let the tools of achievement rust neglected under their hats.

They use only those which necessity forces into their hands and heads, and "never understand" how some fellows get all the breaks.

In the words of Zakurri, "Nothing for nothing is given here."

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

YOU are trying to live on an allowance.

Six weeks or longer ago you figured that you would save a certain sum out of that allowance for a purpose that interests you.

But you haven't it.

You sort of estimated your set expenses, even added a little for extra outlays.

But somehow your expectations have not been realized.

Isn't it because you have been in the habit of spending small sums without paying any particular attention to the amounts?

It does not seem possible to you that these tiny sums—these really insignificant expenditures could upset your finances.

Suppose you go over the little things you have bought within a few days and figure them up.

A few cents here and there, more or less for this and that as it came up, and no thought of the morrow.

Such a trifling matter, but it does not take many trifling sums to make a dollar and perhaps several dollars, practically wasted, for you cannot even remember the object you had in view when you let the money slip out.
